Ex-Kaiser Describes Building of Big Navy

Chancellor Bismarck Retires From Office; Criticises Successor

Emperor Provides for Future of Navy by Securing Heligoland From British—Caprivi, Made Chancellor, Is Fought by Birmarck and His Followers.

Following is the fifth of thirty daily installments of the memoirs of Wilhelm Hohenzollern, formerly Kaiser Wilhelm II, of the former German empire. The entire series is copyrighted for The Atlanta Constitution by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, entered at Stationers' Hall, London. BY WILHELM HOHENZOLLERN
(Former Kaiser of Germany)

V.

When I began my reign, General Von Caprivi was Chief of the Admiralty. He was the last General to hold this post. I at once took energetically in hand the development and reform—in fact, one may say the foundation anew—of the Imperial German Navy, based on my preliminary studies in England and at home. That was not to the liking of the General, who was able but rather self-willed and not entirely devold of pride.

Unquestionably he had rendered valuable services in mobilization, improvement of the officer corps and the improvement and development of the torpedo boat organization. On the other hand, the building of ships and the replacement of worn out material were in a deplorable state, to the detriment of the fleet and to the dissatisfaction of the shipbuilding industry, which was growing and looking about for employment.

Being an old Prussian General, Caprivi's way of thinking was that of his day—that of his comrades of 1864, 1865, 1870, 1871—in his eyes, the army had always done everything and would continue to do so in the future; therefore, no great demands for money to be devoted to the navy should be imposed upon the country, since, should this be done, there was danger that the sums destined to the army might be decreased and its development thereby hampered. This idea, from which he was not to be dissuaded, is false. The amounts granted did not flow into a reservoir from which they might be directed, by the mere turning of a valve, now into army, now in navy, channels. Whenever Caprivi was unwilling to demand anything for naval construction, in order, by so doing, to turn more money toward the army, things did not happen as he foresaw. By his action the army received not one penny more, but merely whatever the Minister of War asked for and received in accordance with his budget.

Admiral Named Secretary of Navy.

There was need of creating a secretaryship of state for the navy, which, entirely independent of the ministry of war, should have as its duty to demand and obtain for the navy as much as was required for the protection of our commerce and colonies. And that is what came to pass later.

Caprivi soon came to me with the request that I relieve him from his post. He stated that he was not satisfied with it in itself; that, moreover, I had all sorts of plans for the future affecting the navy which he considered impossible of realization in the first place, because there existed no means of replacement for the officer corps—at that time the yearly influx of cadets was between sixty and eighty—and a large navy without a large officer corps was unthinkable. In addition to this, he informed me, he had soon seen in the course of the inspection tours of his majesty that the emperor knew more about naval matters than he, the general, which placed him in an impossible situation in relation to his subordinates.

In view of these circumstances, I parted with him, placing him in command of an army corps. Following the motto "The navy for the seamen!" I chose, for the first time an admiral as its chief, a step which was received in maritime circles with great joy. The man chosen was Admiral Count Monts.

Bismarck's Successor Is Appointed.

When I was soon afterward confronted with the rather unexpected retirement of Prince Bismarck, I found the choice of his successor a difficult one. Whoever it might be was sure to have a hard task without any prospect of appreciation for what he might achieve; he would be looked upon as the usurper of a post to which he was not entitled and which he was not qualified to fill. Criticism, criticism, nothing but criticism—that was sure to be the daily bread upon which the new chancellor must reckon, and he was also certain of becoming the target for the hostility of all those who favored Prince Bismarck as well as with that of the many who previously could not do enough in opposition to him. There was bound to be a strong current of enmity toward the new chancellor, in which the old prince himself would not be the least serious factor.

After taking all this into consideration, it was decided to choose a man belonging to Prince Bismarck's genera-

Charlotte Mills Says "Political Gang" Hinders Sleuths, She Hears.

New Brunswick, N. J., September 27.—Charlotte Mils, 16 years old, today wrote a letter to Governor Edwards, of New Jersey, asking him to help her find the murderer of her mother, Mrs. James Mills, who was slain two weeks ago tomorrow with Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist.

In her letter, little Miss Mills wrote that she had heard that a political gang, which "is running things" was interfering with the investigation of the shooting of her mother.

"I am Charlotte Mills, of New Brunswick," she wrote. "My mother, as you know, was murdered two weeks ago and it seems to me that the investigation is not bringing results. I have received letters from strangers saying that the political gang is running things. Can this be true?

"Ae we have no means whatever to get legal help, is there not some way, dear governor, you can help me find the murderer of my mother? Charlotte Mills."

Charlotte wrote the letter after she returned from school, which she resumed today. On her way to school this morning, she said she and her father did not discuss the tragedy at home, as they could agree on but few of the details in connection with the double shooting.

The authorities who have been employed for the past several days on an intensive study of the clues in the case as supporting first blackmail, and then jealousy, as motives for the crime, announced tonight they were investigating the activites of a secret society in the absence of other definite leads.

Prosecutor Stricker said this new theory had been taken up on the discovery of conclusive evidence that the society was an active force in New Brunswick.

Detectives were insistent there was sufficient evidence at least to call for a study of this new theory. The authorities, while declining to discuss other evidence which they indicated was in their possession, substantiating the theory that self-appointed moral censors were responsible for the dual slaying said "the logical conclusion" of such a theory was that the couple were summoned to a trial by the society before they were killed.

Good News for All Who Go to Florida By the Auto Route

Jacksonville, Fla., September 27.—Judge H. B. Phillips, chairman of the state road department, told the Kiwanis club here today that the Dixie highway between Jacksonville and the Georgia state line would be in such condition within three or four weeks as to make detours unnecessary. With good weather, he stated, the grading will be completed and automobiles can traverse it.

BORAH MAY LEAD THIRD NATIONAL POLITICAL PARTY

Idaho Senator to Fight Convention System in Favor of Direct Primaries in Own State.

BY CLAYTON WHITEHILL

Washington, September 27.—Senator William E. Borah leaves for Idaho Thursday. His going foreshadows the possible development of a third party. A nationwide return to the direct primary system would be the keystone of the third party structure.

Although Borah has no personal senatorial fight on his hands—his term expires March 3, 1925—he is entering the Idaho state legislature fight to help in the election of liberal republicans. And, in the opinion of observers here, he would not be chagrined at the election of a democratic legislature. His purpose is to help restore the direct primary system in Idaho. The last republican legislature repealed the direct primary law, in 1918.

The republican candidates in the present campaign in Idaho are running on a pro-convention system platform. The democrats favor a return to the primary system. Borah would prefer, it is known, to support a liberal republican group if possible because he wants to stay in the party.

For Third Party.

Should liberal republicans or democrats be defeated in Idaho this fall, it will be a signal for definite steps in the direction of a third party, and Borah would stand a chance of heading that third party. The action of the Idaho legislature in repealing the direct primary law in 1918 is said to have been with a view to getting Borah's scalp in 1924.

Borah's friends, however, believe that popular sentiment throughout the country favors a return to the direct primary system, and that such administration victories as that recorded by Senator Frelinghuysen in New Jersey are certain of a liberal reaction in 1924.

It is an open secret that a wide cleavage already exists in the republican party because of the direct primary issue. The administration is on record as favoring the growth of the convention system. President Harding, in his Lincoln memorial dedication address, endorsed the convention system. Secretary Weeks has also come out in favor of removing politics from the direct contact of the people.

To Support Old Guard.

The ideal third party, therefore, would not be a third party in that it would run in close competition with the old guard republicans and the democrats. It would supplant, if possible, the old guard republicans. Borah and his liberal associates both in senate and house are of the belief that the American government is essentially a two-party government.

Already, it is known, these two factions of the republican party are lining up. All the administration leaders represent the pro-convention faction. Senators Borah, Johnson, La Follette, Norris, Norbeck—and in the new congress, Senators Brookhart and Frazier—and Representatives Woodruff and Johnson, represent the liberalizing faction. Members of this group have gone so far as to predict that a reconciliation is impossible.

Whether Borah would be a presidential candidate in 1924 as the choice of this liberal faction, or serve as its organization leader with LaFollette as the presidential choice is still highly speculative. At present the political sympathies of organized labor would seem to favor LaFollette.

U. S. DESTROYERS ORDERED TO RUSH TO DARDANELLES

Will Carry Extra Supply of Provisions and Go to Protect American Interests.

SHIPS AT DISPOSAL OF ADMIRAL BRISTOL

Vessels Are With Atlantic Fleet and Will Sail as Promptly as Possible.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, September 27.—Secretary Denby today ordered two destroyer divisions, comprising twelve destroyers, to proceed "as early as possible from Norfolk to Constantinople with extra supply of provisions" in response to a request from Rear Admiral Mark Bristol, American high commissioner at Constantinople, that they be sent "for the protection of American interests."

In addition the supply ship Bridge will proceed as soon as possible to Constantinople.

"The purpose of sending these ships is to protect American interests," it was declared, "and furnish supplies should they be needed. The method of distribution and in general the use to be made of the supplies so furnished will be determined by Admiral Bristol."

ORDERS RECEIVED AT NORFOLK.

Norfolk, Va., September 27.—Orders for the movement of the two destroyer divisions were received at the office of Admiral Rodman, commandant of the fifth naval district, this afternoon. As soon as the Atlantic fleet, with which are 38 destroyers in battle practice off the Virginia Capes, reports at the naval base probably tonight, it was stated, twelve of the destroyers most fit for early departure will be selected by Admiral McDonald, to sail for Constantinople. The supply ship Bridge also is with Admiral McDonald's fleet.

JUDGE J. W. MADDOX IS DEAD AT ROME

End of Long Public Career Came Wednesday Night After Extended Illness.

Rome, Ga., September 27.—(Special.)—Judge John W. Maddox, one of north Georgia's most distinguished citizens, died at his home here tonight, after an illness of several weeks. He was 74 years of age, had represented the seventh district in congress, was a former judge of Floyd county superior court, mayor of Rome at one time, and had held other public offices in Floyd and Chattooga counties.

He came here from Summerville about 30 years ago. He was a confederate veteran.

Judge Maddox was the father of G. Ed Maddox, of this city, now prominently mentioned as chairman of the next democratic executive committee; of James Maddox, present solicitor of Floyd city court, and several other sons.

The funearl will be held at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Interment will be in Myrtle Hill cemetery.

MEMPHIS REPORTER ADVISED TO LEAVE TOWN BY JUDGE

Marion, Ark., September 27.—With five venires exhausted and still only 11 men in the jury box to hear the evidence against Hugh Boriand, striking railroad shopman, charged with murder in connection with the killing of two negro employes of the Rock Island road at Hulbert Ark., last August, a new venire of 15 men was ordered to report in court tomorrow morning.

Judge R. E. L. Johnson ordered a Memphis newspaper man from the court room on account of published statements alleged to have reflected on the methods used in selecting the jury.

Judge Johnson advised him "as a matter of his own safety to leave Marion," which he did.

BODY OF WATSON TO LIE IN STATE AT HICKORY HILL

BODY TO REACH HOME THURSDAY MORNING

Boyhood Teacher Mourns.

Thomson, Ga., September 27.—No one in Thomson is more deeply grieved over the death of Senator Thomas E. Watson than Robert H. Pearce, octogenarian, teacher and lifelong friend of "The Sage of McDuffie."

An invalid, his inability to personally convey his sympathy to Mrs. Watson, is an added sorrow to Mr. Pearce.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Thomson, Ga., September 27.—Final preparations for the funeral of Senator Thomas E. Watson, who died Tuesday in Washington and whose body is expected to reach here tomorrow morning, were completed today.

The services will be held at "Hickory Hill," the famous Watson home, at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, with Rev. E. J. Forrester, of Sparta, formerly pastor of the Thomson Baptist church and close personal friend of the late senator, officiating. He will be assisted by Rev. J. T. Eakes, pastor of the Thomson Methodist Episcopal church.

Services at the grave will be directed by the Thomson council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of which Senator Watson was a member. Senator Watson's mother and father are buried in the Thomson cemetery and his body will be placed beside their graves.

Accompanied by a party of United States senators and the Georgia congressional delegation, the body is due here at 11:55 o'clock tomorrow morning. The senator's Washington staff also is in the funeral party.

To Suspend Business.

All business houses in Thomson will be closed Thursday afternoon out of respect for Mr. Watson.

"Every honor within the province the town will be paid Senator Thomas E. Watson when he is laid to rest here tomorrow," declared Mayor W. C. McCommons today in discussing the funneral arrangements. Mr. McCommons said every place of business in the town would be closed tomorrow afternoon, and that Thomson was doing everything possible to handle the crowds expected here for the funeral.

Senator Watson's body will lie in state at his home on "Hickory Hill" tomorrow and hundreds of followers and acquaintances from all walks of life will be permitted to view the remains before they are laid to rest in the family plot in the Thomson cemetery.

Funeral services, according to members of the family, will be delayed until all persons who desire to view the body have passed the bier.

The body will reach here tomorrow at 11:55 o'clock, coming over the Atlantic Coast Line railroad and the Georgia Railroad from Washington via Augusta. Funeral services were planned for 1:30 in the afternoon, but friends and relatives are convinced that hundreds will desire to gaze for the last time upon the face of the "Sage of McDuffie," and so the hour of the funeral will depend upon the disposition of the crowd expected to throng this little Georgia town tomorrow.

Short Home Service.

Plans for the funeral were perfected today. A short religious service will be held at the home, Rev.

Constitution Bureau,

Washington, September 27.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—The flag on the capitol was lowered at half-mast today through respect to Senator Thomas E. Watson. It will remain so for a month, and when the senate convenes at its next session it will immediately adjourn in further respect.

Among the floral tributes received by the family today was a magnificent wreath from President and Mrs Warren G. Harding. There were others from Senator Watson's former colleagues and personal admirers at the capitol.

An impressive array of orchids bore the card of Senator and Mrs. W. J. Harris, of Georgia. The state congressional delegation also sent a handsome sheath of lilies. Senator Heflin, one of the Georgia senator's closest friends in the senate, expressed his esteem with roses, forming a conspicuous part of the display.

Throughout the day visitors and friends continued to call at the Watson home, while hundreds of telegrams poured in.

Senator Watson is the fourth member of the upper house of congress to die during the present session. Knox, Penrose and Crowe, all of Pennsylvania, preceded him in the order named.

REVOLT IN GREECE SPREADING AFTER 'TINO ABDICATES

Army and Navy Both Join Revolutionaries and Mutinous Troops Land Near Athens.

EVENTS MOVED FAST AFTER CABINET QUIT

Two Ultimatums From Rebels in Quick Succession Bring 'Tino to Full Acceptance of Terms.

Athens, September 27.—Revolution is spreading throughout Greece, following the abdication of King Constantine.

Both the army and the navy have joined the revolutionaries. The entire Greek fleet, officers and men, has revolted. Various units of the army are hurrying to attach themselves to the revolutionary standard. There were reports of disaffection from all parts of the country.

Mutinous troops have landed at several points near Athens, and government leaders are conferring with the chiefs of the insurgents. Colonel Gonmas is heading the revolutionary movement in the army.

Events Moved Fast.

Events followed fast after the resignation of the cabinet late Tuesday.

Revolt spread, and early Wednesday the king issued a message to the Greek people announcing that he had abdicated in favor of his son in the interest of peace and unity, and the welfare of Greece.

An airplane which circled the city, dropped a proclamation signed by Colonel Gonnas, leader of the insurgents, declaring that the troops and naval forces of the Islands of Chois and Mitylene joined in the demand of the people that the king abdicate, that the national assembly be dissolved immediately, that a new cabinet which inspired the confidence of the country be installed, that the election of a new assembly be ordered, and that the Thracian front be immediately reinforced.

King Constantine in a desperate eleventh-hour effort decired martial law and convened the crown council. But it was too late. The revolutionaries issued a second ultimatum, and Constantine yielded.

Troops Mutiny.

Greek transports are on the way from Mitylene loaded with mutinous troops, and are expected to land at Athens within a few hours. A British ship captain arriving from Mitylene reported that all officers who refused to join the revolution were being imprisoned.

The immediate cause of the revolt in the islands was the order to disarm the troops. The soldiers had expected to retain their rifles as trophies or

Woman Figures In Mysterious Shooting Case

Man Found Dead Near Lakewood Was Murdered, Asserts Detective.

Laundry marks found on the shirt and collar of the unidentified man who was found Wednesday morning near Lakewood with a bullet hole through his heart will soon lead to his identification, according to Detectives W. H. Hames and W. R. Adams, of the Adams Detective agency, 605 Gould building, who are working on the case.

The laundry marks that furnish the clue are two marks on the inside of the collar—one "305" and the other "A-144." The first mark is an old laundry mark—the second a more recent one. The number found on the inside of the shirt is also "A-144."

Detective Hames, who has been investigating the case very carefully, claims that he has established the identity of the man, but refuses to give it out until his investigations are completed.

KEMALISTS AGREE WATERS OF STRAITS SHALL BE NEUTRAL

British Commander Urges Early Meeting of British and Kemalist Generals to Avoid War.

SITUATION IS TENSE IN NEUTRAL ZONE

But Straits Agreement Is Believed to Have Reduced Probabilities of Open Warfare.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Constantinople, September 27.—Turkish cavalry from Erin Keui, with reinforcements, is advancing to the northeast on Asmali-Tope, apparently to cut off the British advanced post at Kephez.

BELIEVE DANGER OVER FOR TIME.

Constantinople, September 27.—Possible war between Great Britain and Turkey was at least temporarily averted this afternoon by an eleventh-hour declaration of the Kemalists that they would respect the neutrality of the straits, pending an armistice conference.

The declaration relieves the situation, which even the British had admitted was critical.

In a message to Kemal Pasha, at Smyrna, General Harrington urged an early meeting of the British and Kemalist generals at Mudania or Ismid as the most effective way of reaching an amicable understanding in the present difficult situation created by the Kemalist advance in the Dardanelles.

The message, which was most conciliatory in tone, declared it would be a pity at the present juncture to allow local occupations on the straits to jeopardize peace.

Prior to announcement that the Kemalists would respect the neutrality of the straits, Hamid Bey, the Angora representative, said to the correspondent: "The Kemalists naturally will come across the so-called neutral zones, but they have not the slightest intention of firing upon the British occupying those zones. If, however, the British move against us, we will be forced to reply."

General Harrington replied to Kemal Pasha thanking him for the declaration that he would respect the neutrality of the straits and that he wished to avoid a conflict. The British commander added that the destruction of which Kemal complained was prompted by military necessity and declared that no shot had been fired against the Turks in Anger nor would there be except under his orders. He concluded by expressing readiness to meet Kemal at any convenient place to discuss an understanding.

EVADES QUESTION OF NEUTRAL ZONE.

Constantinople, September 27.—Mustapha Kemal has sent a note to General Sir Charles Harrington, the British commander in the Near East, evading the questions raised in the allied ultimatum and standing that

Watson's Aunt Hears News of 2 Relatives' Deaths in One Day

Athens, Ga., September 27.—(Special).—Mrs. Isaac Lowe, aunt of Senator Thomas E. Watson, who lives with Miss Evie Jackson in Athens, heard of two deaths of relatives Tuesday. She was notified by wire of the death of her nephew, Senator Watson, and at the same time heard of the death of her brother, Preston Hendon, in Texas.

Mr. Hendon was a veteran of the war between the states and served with distinction in the confederate army. He was well known in this city.

Several of Senator Watson's relatives from Athens have already left for Thomson to attend the funeral. Mrs. Watson was here as the guest of Mrs. Lowe only a few weeks ago.

Memorial Service Will Be Held Today For Senator Watson

A memorial service for Senator Thomas E. Watson will be held at the Central Baptist church this afternoon at 3 o'clock under the auspices of the Georgia Women's Political league.

Dr. Caleb Ridley will speak on "The Empty Chair," and brief talks will be made by Carl F. Hutcheson and Mrs. E. H. Gibbs, president of the league. All members of the league are urged to be present.

BODY OF WATSON TO LIE IN STATE

E. J. Forrester, of Sparta, Ga., close personal friend of the Watsons, officiating. Rev. J. T. Eakes, pastor of the First Methodist church here, will assist Rev. Forrester.

Following the home services, the body will be borne to the grave, where other religious services will be held after which the Thomson council, Junior Order of American Mechanics, of which Senator Watson was a member, will conclude the burial services.

Active pallbearers—all friends of the dead senator—were named today as follows: H. T. Clary, J. M. Hayes, R. E. Neel, Curry Colvin, J. M. Hogan and J. H. Cartledge. Mr. Cartledge was formerly the managing editor of The Jeffersonian. H. T. Clary, another of the pallbearers, is sheriff of McDuffie county.

Many Floral Tributes.

The Watson home today resembled a huge florist establishment. Hundreds of floral tributes have been received and others are arriving on every train. The local telegraph office has been swamped under the avalanche of messages of sympathy. Flowers and telegrams are being received from all sections of the country. Three close friends of the family arrived last night and are at the Watson home. They are Benjamin M. Blackburn, of Atlanta; Mrs. Walter Lowe, of Athens, and Mrs. J. D. Findley, of Decatur, Ga.

JUNIOR ORDER WILL CONDUCT GRAVE RITES.

Augusta, Ga., September 27.—Senator Thomas E. Watson, who died Tuesday in Washington, was a member of the Thomson council of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, according to C. Vernon Elliot, past state councilor, who conferred the obligation upon the senator. The obligation was conferred two years ago when Mr. Elliott was state councillor, the obligation being conferred at the Watson home in Thomson on special dispensation from the national council.

The Thomson council, it is understood, will have charge of the services at the grave when Senator Watson is laid to rest Thursday at Thomson. Two local councils of the Junior Order will hold special meetings tonight to perfect plans for a full attendance of members at the funeral.

GREEK REVOLUTION CONTINUES TO SPREAD

for personal use. The revolt in Salonica was inspired by a desire to reinforce the Greek troops in Thrace and hold that province against the Turks.

Refugees on the Greek islands are reported to be aiding the mutinous troops and sailors.

No Reservations.

King Constantine's abdication was made without reservations. The deposed monarch agreed to every demand of the revolutionists including those calling for the dissolution of the assembly, the calling of new elections, and the reinforcement of the army in Thrace.

While the internal disorders were at their height, the British and French ministers dispatched a note to the Greek government suggesting that Greek warships be withdrawn from Turkish waters. The presence of the Greek naval force, the allied diplomats said, was hampering the prospects of effecting peace with the Turks.

Constantine's abdication has been predicted since the Greek army suffered its humiliating defeat in Asia Minor and was practically driven into the sea at Smyrna.

But the allied decision that Thrace must be given back to the Turks is what brought the revolution to a head. In a futile effort to turn back the revolutionary tide, the Greek cabinet appealed to former Premier Venizelos for assistance in persuading the allies to modify their stand.

It is not yet known if Prince George will ascend the throne.

TWICE OCCUPIED THRONE OF GREECE.

Constantine twice occupied the throne of Greece. His first reign began March 18, 1913, with the assassination of his father, George I., and continued until June, 1917, when he was forced by the demands of Great Britain, France and Russia to abdicate because of his pro-German sympathies.

He was succeeded by his second son, Alexander, who was nominated by the deposed monarch and who had proposed to carry out Constantine's policies, despite allied demands to the contrary. For three stormy years Alexander reigned in name only. Then his tragic death in 1920, due to the bite of a pet monkey, again turned the spotlight on Constantine, who had spent the intervening three years in exile with his large family.

A plebiscite had shown that the Greek nation was insistent on the return of Constantine to the throne, and while the allied governments continued to exert every pressure at their command to prevent his re-ascension, the former king marched triumphantly into Athens and was crowned in December, 1920, amid scenes of the wildest enthusiasm.

Constantine was born August 3, 1868, and obtained his education under German tutors and army officers. Once, in 1909, he was dismissed as commander of the Greek army because of popular clamor against him, but he became a national hero in the Balkan war of 1912, when he led a Greek army in the capture of Saloniki from the Turks. In consequence of this achievement he was accorded the popular title of "The Liberator."

Prince George is the eldest son of Constantine. He also was pro-German and was excluded from succession by the allied terms which compelled his father's abdication in 1917. He accompanied the royal party to Asia Minor in 1921 and was a member of the staff of the Greek commander, General Papoulas. George was born in July, 1890, and married Princess Elizabeth, of Rumania, in the spring of 1921. The only other son of Constantine is Prince Paul, born in December, 1901.

While Prince George had been regarded as the heir apparent since Constantine's return to the throne, the deported monarch also has four brothers who were considered eligible for kingly honors. These in the order of succession are Prince George, after whom crown prince was named, born in 1869; Prince Nicholas, born in 1872; Prince Andreas, born in 1882, and Prince Christopher, born in 1888.

VENIZELOS IS SILENT.

Deauville, France, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—Former Premier Elipherios Venizelos, of Greece, first heard the news of King Constantine's abdication from a dispatch shown him by The Associated Press correspondent this evening. He refused to make comment.

VENIZELOS NOT TO ACT YET.

Paris, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—M. Venizelos, who was prostrated by the Greek disaster, went to Deauville for rest and quiet. He had been informed of the latest turn in the situation at Athens by his friends in Paris, and will make no plans until he has received full advices. It is understood that he expects to return to Paris Friday, when he will consult with his friends and decide upon the course of action to be followed.

The adherents of Venizelos here are doubtful that he will join any new ministry at present and incline to the belief that he will play a more effective role in trying to save as much as possible from the wreck as Greece's representative at the peace conference. In any case M. Venizelos will take no part in affairs until endorsed by a freely expressed popular mandate.

The movement which has resulted in the abdication of King Constantine had long been planned. The leaders are a number of army officers who became disgusted with the incompetent conduct of the campaign in Asia Minor. They are by no means all Venizelosists but foresaw disaster. They have now but one idea, those in Paris who are in close touch with them say, to minimize as far as possible the consequences of recent events.

General Nider, who is mentioned in connection with the formation of a new Greek government, is of Bavarian descent. He is described by a friend not a Greek as a man of the highest character and integrity, a capable officer and a fine organizer and administrator, with an attractive personality. Two years ago he commanded the Greek forces at Afiun Karahissar and was equally popular with Turks and Greeks. There were never any atrocities in his area. He came under the suspected list a. Athens, however, and was relieved o. his command and placed on ha pay.

ROYAL ENGAGEMENT IS CALLED OFF.

Copenhagen, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—It will be officially announced tomorrow that Crown Prince Frederick, of Denmark, and Princess Olga, niece of King Constantine, of Greece, have by mutual agreement annulled their engagement.

The engagement of Crown Prince Frederick to Princess Olga was announced last March, following a visit of the couple at Cannes. The wedding was to have taken place this September, but it was found that the castle at Amallenboro which the royal pair were to occupy, could not be finished in time, so it was postponed until next year.

Prior to the announcement of the engagement, the prince and princess had met but twice. This gave rise to the report that it was a case of love at first sight. The crown prince was born on March 11, 1899, and the princess in May, 1903.

AGOGA CLASS WILL HOLD ANNUAL RALLY

Seven hundred members are expected to be present at the annual rally of the Agoga class of the Baptist Tabernacle, which will be held at 9:45 o'clock Sunday morning, October 1.

For the past two weeks a committee of twenty members, with Louie Langford as chairman, has been meeting daily arranging details of the campaign. Five thousand letters and circulars have been gotten out; twenty loving cups and twelve pennants won by the class will be put on display in a window of George Muse's clothing store, and on Saturday a brass band will parade the streets in the interest of the rally.

The Georgia Railway and Power company has furnished the class with advertising space, and stencils will be made on the sidewalks through the down-town district telling of the rally.

Never before has a membership drive for a Sunday school class been so carefully outlined and so aggressive.

FOUR FALSE FIRE ALARMS SOUNDED IN HOUR'S TIME

Fire officials and city detectives are combing the city for the person who turned in four false fire alarms within an hour Wednesday night.

The first alarm was turned in at 9:26 o'clock from McLendon and Kuhns streets. At 9:32, before all the apparatus had returned to their stations, there was a call to Peachtree and Brookwood bridge. The third came from Peachtree circle and 16th street at 10:05, and the last from Ponce de Leon and Bedford place. All four were false alarms.

The police believe the person responsible for the depredations is mentally unbalanced, and takes delight in seeing the fire engines rush madly down the street imperiling the lives of pedestrians and fire fighters alike. They believe, they say, that whoever turned in the alarms used an automobile.

Congressman Brand Unable to Attend Funeral of Watson

Congressman C. H. Brand, who is confined to his room at the Piedmont sanitarium, Atlanta, by a bronchial attack, yesterday received a wire from the clerk of the house of representatives, Washington, D. C., notifying him that he had been appointed by the speaker of the house as a representative to attend the funeral of Senator Thomas E. Watson, at Thomson, Ga.

Immediately upon receipt of a telegram from Senator Watson's secretary advising him of the senator's death, Mr. Brand sent the following telegram:

"No person has ever departed this life whose death I mourn more intensely than Senator Watson's. His death is a great personal loss to me. No one sympathizes and grieves with you and the grandchildren more than I do. I am sick in bed—otherwise would go to Washington and accompany the remains home. It is a source of inexpressible regret that illness will prevent me from being at the funeral."

While Congressman Brand's illness is not serious, it will cause him to forego several meetings which he was scheduled to attend.

Congressman Gordon Lee, of Chickamauga, Ga., representative in the lower house from the seventh district, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday night en route to Thompson to attend the funeral of the late Senator Watson.

"Senator Watson's passing has removed from Georgia and the nation," declared Congressman Lee, "one of its brainest men. He had just begun to be regarded in Washington as one of the most powerful leaders. At no time since his entering the senate has he worked other than in harmony with the Georgia delegation. The vacancy caused by his death will be hard to fill in the manner as characterized Senator Watson's efforts."

Congressman Lee will leave at 6:15 o'clock Thursday morning over the Georgia railway for Thomson. He will return to Atlanta at night and will leave Saturday morning for Cedartown where he is scheduled to deliver an address in the evening.

WATSON EULOGIZED BY ATLANTA LABOR

A resolution to direct the secretary to send a telegram of condolence to Mrs. Thomas E. Watson conveying the sympathy of organized labor in Atlanta, was adopted by the Atlanta Federation of Trades at a meeting held last night. President Emmet L. Quinn directed that the message be at once dispatched.

The late Senator Watson was eulogized on the federation floor as one of the greatest of Georgians.

A request from Samuel Gompers and members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor that the organized labor people of Atlanta call a mass meeting on Sunday, October 1, to emphatically protest against the Daugherty injunction, was turned down.

The communication from Mr. Gompers called upon the Atlanta unions to form a public demonstration against the injunction which was roundly denounced as an attempt to curtail the liberty of American workers. When the letter was read a spirited debate was at once precipitated, William Pollard and Delegate Cannon urging that a mass meeting be called for next Sunday.

Delegates Paul Donehoo and Dan Green, however, took the opposite view, Mr. Donehoo stating that it would not be the proper thing to demonstrate against the injunction in view of the fact that the case is still in the courts. He said that organized labor could give more substantial aid in fighting the injunction than by demonstrations.

Because of the limited time between the present date and next Sunday there was much doubt expressed as to whether a mass meeting could be successfully assembled.

A motion to comply with Mr. Gompers' request to call a meeting of protest was lost by the adoption of a substitute motion to receive the communication as information and file it in the archives of the federation.

In the discussion of a question that involved the name of the Southern Labor congress, which be declared should be dead and buried, William Pollard warned the Atlanta central labor body of the presence of bolshevism in this city. He said:

"The number of men in this city who believe we are drifting towards international government and who will tell you they are willing to take orders direct from Moscow is constantly increasing. If you don't know that, you have not been around like I have."

A motion to send delegates to a labor convention to be held in Chattanooga October 17 precipitated the debate that brought forth the delegates' attack on the Southern Labor congress. It was urged that the Atlanta central labor body should send representatives to the Chattanooga convention, but Delegate William Van Houten opposed the motion as well as Charles B. Gramling, who urged that the matter be referred to the executive board.

The motion to elect delegates to the Chattanooga convention at the next meeting of the federation prevailed.

A spirited discussion took place over the question of Lakewood Fair association, which has not yet replaced non-union material workers and moving-picture operators with union men, but no definite action was taken by the federation.

W. B. Honea was nominated and elected a member of the board of trustees of the Federation of Trades, Vice Delegate W. E. Wells having left Atlanta. Mr. Honea was also named by President Quinn as a member of the legislative committee. Mr. Honea is president of the Atlanta Local 137 Street Railway Employees' union.

Reports were made that a number of the shop craftsmen have returned to work, but that others are still out. Appeals were made for funds for the relief of those still on strike.

The next meeting of the federation will begin at 7:30 o'clock instead of 8.

Believe Charred Body Was Stolen FromGirl'sGrave

St. Louis, Mo., September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—Police this afternoon discovered evidence which, they said, indicated that the charred body found in the ruins of a garage destroyed by fire at Oakville, Mo., St. Louis county, and believed to be that of Harry Brenn, 26, the proprietor, may be that of Miss Celeste Schneider, 18, which was stolen from a grave in Mount Hope cemetery Monday night.

Brenn, who it was learned carried a total of $16,000 life insurance, has been missing since Monday.

Mrs. Brenn testified at an inquest last night that she did not see her husband after he left home Monday evening in answer to a telephone call for road service. She is sought by the police for questioning.

The fire occurred at the garage early Tuesday. Police said that a man who gave his name as Harry Brenn reported Monday night that he had been attacked and robbed of $65 by six masked men. He said the men had called him to repair their automobile.

Dr. T. L. Carrier, autopsy surgeon of St. Louis county, after an examination of the charred body announced that it was that of a woman and not that of a man, as at first supposed.

Detectives who investigated the burning of the garage reported finding a spade with fresh earth clinging to it and a piece of black cloth, which they believed to be a part of a shroud, in the ruins. Later police said the earth which was found sticking to the spade was identical to the earth taken from the Schneider girl's grave.

It was discovered that the body of the Schneider girl, who died August 30, was taken out of its grave after the sexton of the cemetery found the empty coffin on the edge of the cemetery.

The parents of the dead girl, it was learned, have been estranged, and were arrested. Both denied knowledge of the disappearance of their daughter's body from its grave and disclaimed any knowledge of the garage fire.

SOUTHERN TARIFF BODY TO MEET IN WASHINGTON

Fort Worth, Texas, September 27.—(Special.)—The Southern Tariff association will hold a tariff congress in Washington October 6 and 7, according to an official call issued today by John H. Kirby, president of the association, from southern headquarters of the organization here.

The congress is called for the purpose of giving final expression to the views of southern industry on the McCumber-Fordney tariff measure and to consider further activities of the tariff association. A committee will be in session in Washington during the entire week beginning next Monday for the purpose of arranging the program and formulating a line of activity to be submitted to the congress, according to the call.

It is probable that the program committee will ask each industry to designate some one of their members to briefly submit to President Harding the views of their opinion on the bill as a whole.

PRINTING PRESSMEN URGE IMPEACHMENTS

Knoxville, Tenn., September 27.—A motion urging all local unions of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America to petition their representatives in congress to seek the impeachment from office of Federal Judge Wilkerson and Attorney-General Daugherty, was unanimously adopted at today's session of the twenty-ninth biennial convention at Pressmen's home. Another feature of today's session was an address by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in which he commended the work of the organization and especially Major George L. Berry, president. Major Berry, who is also national vice commander of the American Legion, has been a factor in bringing about a proper understanding between the federation and the legion, said Mr. Gompers.

Alert Citizens Bring Disaster To Bandit Gang

Two Dead, One Dying, Two Wounded, Accounts for Entire Holdup Party.

Eureka Springs, Ark., September 27. Five bandits, heavily armed, rode into this mountain town in two automobiles at 11 o'clock this morning to rob the First National bank. Tonight the bodies of two of them are in an undertaker's establishment, one bandit is so badly wounded that his death is momentarily expected, and two other members of the gang, with less severe wounds, are in the guarded jail as the result of a battle between the bandits and citizens of Eureka Springs.

The dead robbers have been identified as Sid Wilson, 40, and George Price, 40, both of Crookstown, Okla. Charles Price, brother of George Price, is the man not expected to live, and Mark Hendricks, 45, Park Hill, Okla., and Sam Cowan, driver of one of the bandits' automobiles, are the men in jail. Cowan is believed to be a resident of Joplin, Mo. Charles Price was operated on tonight.

On entering the town this morning the men drove directly to the bank. They made the usual commands which were obeyed by the bank employees.

Sounded Alarm.

The robbers looted the bank vaults, securing $95,000 in bonds and $25,000 in cash, which they placed in sacks. While they were at their work E. G. Smith, cashier of the bank, stepped on a button which sounded an alarm simultaneously in five business houses.

The citizens were ready when the quintette emerged from the bank with their sacks of loot. From places of vantage gun-fire was directed at the robbers, who returned the hail of lead.

Ernest Jordon, jeweler, whose place of business adjoins the bank, killed one of them instantly and wounded a second man. Joe McKinney, attorney, fired from an upper window of a building across the street and he duplicated Jordan's feat. Except that Jordon received powder burns, not a resident of the town was wounded in the battle.

Due to the fact that the town is built on a mountain side the streets are not on a level, steps leading down from one street to another. The citizens took advantage of this and occupied positions on a street on a higher level than the bank, firing downward at the bandits.

The automobiles, one a roadster and the other a touring car, in which the bandits entered the town, are in the possession of officers here.

In April of this year Henry Starr, notorious bank bandit and outlaw, paid a visit to the Harrison bank, Harrison, Ark., 20 miles east of Eureka Springs, and met his death from a rifle shot fired by the president of the bank, shooting from concealed loopholes in the vault.

They Sell Photographs Of Prohibition Agents To Saloonkeepers Now

Philadelphia, September 27.—A new and fairly lucrative business resulting from prohibtion, according to J. E. Jones, assistant national prohibition commissioner, is the selling of photographs of prohibition agents to saloonkeepers who violate both the spirit and the letter of the prohibition law. New Jersey saloonkeepers, said Mr. Jones, are glad to pay five dollars apiece for authentic photographs and are anxious to have a complete collection of government agents in their territory.

Mr. Jones also has found that expert counterfeiters are turning from the manufacture of spurious currency to that of removal permits and whisky bottle labels.

Hardware Concern Bankrupt at End Of 120 Years' Trade

Richmond, Va., September 27.—Baldwin, Brown and company, Inc., dealers in hardware and building material, have gone into voluntary bankruptcy after operating uninterruptedly for 120 years. Business depression and other reversals were responsible, it was said. The petition filed in federal court listed the liabilities of the concern at $54,478 with assets of $13,234.

SCIENTISTS DISSOLVE FOGS OF PITTSBURG

Pittsburg, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—A large section of Pittsburg fog was completely put out of business today by scientists, weather officials and experts from the United States engineering department.

The initial experiment, conducted on the Monongahela river, was pronounced a "distinct success." The official fog-removers expressed themselves as confident that considerable "Pittsburg gloom" will be avoided this fall and winter, provided moderate funds are available.

The keynote of the experiment was the lubricating of the Monongahela river, from Rice's landing to a point one and one-half miles upstream early today. The report was made public tonight.

Notified by the weather bureau that a cold wave would sweep through the valley, the scientists proceeded to Rice's landing. As the etshrdlTH warmer water met and fog began to form, a thin spray of oil and organic acid was spread over a broad area of the river. The fog dissipated rapidly. The oil prevented union of the air and water.

Another experiment, on a much broader scale, will be held as soon as the weather bureau forecasts another nice, thick fog—the scientists said.

CASHIER RETURNS AFTER TEN DAYS AND CLEARS SELF

Chicago, September 27.—David E. Carlson, former cashier of the Cottage Grove Avenue State bank, missing ten days, cleared himself within an hour of his return of blame in what was reported to be a $100,000 deficit in the bank's accounts, according H. S. Savage, state bond examiner.

"Investigation confirms Mr. Carlson's statement that when the bank was organized there was a misunderstanding over what constituted assets and liabilities of a former bank that had been taken over," Mr. Savage said.

In explaining his absence during the excitement over the reported "shortage," Carlson said he had been working hard for nine years and on leaving the bank departed on an automobile trip to get a little rest.

"As soon as I saw newspapers telling of this alleged deficit I promptly got in touch with Mr. Savage and told him I would return immediately and help straighten out an internal tangle in the bank's affairs. Everything is in satisfactory shape."

Passengers on Liner Tell Varied Stories Of Phantom Iceberg

New York, September 27.—Tales of a phantom iceberg which agreed in only the most superficial details were told by many of the 800 passengers on the Caronia when the steamship docked today from Cherbourg and Southampton.

The optical illusion, for all agreed that in the last analysis it was such, first was observed some five miles ahead of the steamer last Saturday. Many of the passengers were emphatic in stating that they would never forget the sight; a towering mass of moving whiteness, with jagged peaks which caught and reflected the sun in a thousand facets.

There was perfect agreement among the passengers that "the iceberg" was a hundred feet in height and faded away into nothing. No one agreed as to the exact hour of the appearance of the phenomenon. Some said it was noon, others mid-afternoon and still others that it was in the glory of an ocean sunset.

BUNCO GANG FINES TO BUILD HOSPITAL

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., September 27.—Eighteen thousand of the $20,000 collected in fines from the dozen confessed wire tappers and confidence men tried here last spring will be used by Broward county for construction of a county hospital here for charity and emergency cases, it was announced today.

Dr. Scott Edwards, of Indianapolis, a noted surgeon, will be in charge of the institution and personally will equip the building with the privilege of purchasing it at the end of five years for the original sum invested by the county. Frank H. Stranahan, a pioneer settler of Fort Lauderdale, has given the county twenty-two city lots as a site for the hospital.

Wireless Message Averting Fighting On Chanak Front

Constantinople, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—A wireless message sent to Chanak when the Turkish nationalists occupied Kum Kalesi and other points in the neutral zone was all that prevented an outbreak of hostilities between the British and Turks, it is learned.

Colonel Shuttleworth, commanding the British forces in Chanak, was about to open fire on the advancing Kemalist cavalry squadrons when he received an urgent radio from Brigadier-General Harington in Constantinople instructing him to suspend the attack until all peaceful measures were exhausted.

In consequence a British officer was sent to the Kemalist lines under a white flag to inform the nationalist commander that unless he retreated the British would open fire. After further parleys the Turks were given forty-eight hours in which to withdraw beyond the neutral zone.

Woman Exonerated Whose Bullet Killed Innocent Bystander

Oklahoma City, Okla., September 27.—Mrs. J. C. Tolbert, who shot and killed Matt Green, an innocent bystander, here Monday, when she went gunning for her husband, was exonerated late yesterday by a coroner's jury. The coroner's jury held that the slaying of Green was accidental and that Mrs. Tlobert was justified in trying to end the mortal existence of her husband, who she claimed sent her to the hospital with a broken rib as the result of a beating.

The woman fired at her husband when he drew up in front of their home in an automobile. Green, who was riding with Tolbert, stopped the bullet. He died before reaching a hospital.

Mrs. Tolbert claimed her husband left home declaring that he was going to get a revolver.

tion, who had held a leading position in the wars and had already filled a government position under him. Hence Caprivi was chosen. His age was a guarantee that he would be a careful and calm adviser for the "orphaned" young emperor.

Very soon the question arose of the extension of the reinsurance treaty with Russia. Caprivi declared that, out of consideration for Austria, he was unable to renew it, since the threat against Austria contained therein when it became known in Vienna—as it almost unavoidably would—was such as to lead to very disagreeable consequences. For this reason the treaty lapsed. To my way of thinking, it had already lost its main value from the fact that the Russians no longer stood whole-heartedly behind it. I was confirmed in this view by a memorial written by Count Berchem, undersecretary of state, who had worked with Prince Bismarck.

Still Opposed By Bismarck.

The agrarian conservatives opposed Caprivi as a man without landed property and a violent fight raged around the commercial treaties. These difficulties were greatly enhanced because Prince Bismarck, ignoring his former maxims, took part in the fight against his successor with all his characteristic energy. Thus arose the opposition of the conservatives against the government and the crown, and the prince in person sowed the seed from which later grew the "misunderstood Bismarck" and that "reichsverdrossenheit" (unfriendliness to the empire), so often taken up in the newspapers. The "misunderstood Bismarck" created permanent opposition throughout my reign against my suggestions and aims by means of quotations, speeches and writings, as well as by passive resistance and thoughtless criticism. Everything that was done was painted in black colors, made ridiculous and criticised from top to bottom by a press that placed itself quite willingly at the disposal of the prince and often out-Bismarcked Bismarck in its behavior.

This phenomenon became most apparent at the time of the acquisition of Heligoland. This island, lying close in front of the great waterways leading to the principal Hanseatic commercial ports, was, in the hands of the British, a constant menace to Hamburg and Bremen and rendered impossible any project for building up a navy. Owing to this, I had firmly resolved to win back this formerly German island to its fatherland.

The Deal For Heligoland.

The way to cause England to give up the red rock of Heligoland was found in the colonial domain. Lord Salisbury proved inclined to exchange the "barren rock" for Zanzibar and Witu in East Africa. From commercial sources and the reports of the commanders of German cruisers and gunboats which were stationed there and cruised along the coast of the recently acquired German East African colonies, I knew that, as soon as Tagn, Dar-es-Salaam, &c., rose to prosperity, the importance of Zanzibar on the coast of Africa as the principal port of transshipment would be a thing of the past, since, as soon as the above-mentioned harbors were made deep enough and provided with sufficient cargo-loading equipment for trading steamers, there would no longer be any need of ferrying goods coming from the interior in shows to Zanzibar, in order to have them again loaded on vessels there, since they could be loaded direct at the new harbors along the coast.

Therefore, I was convinced that we had, first, an acceptable asset for swapping purposes, and, secondly, a good opportunity to avoid colonial friction with England and come to a friendly understanding with her. Caprivi agreed, the negotiations were concluded, and one evening, shortly before dinner, I was able to tell the empress and a few intimates the exceedingly joyful things that Heligoland had become German.

A first and very important extension of the empire had been achieved —without bloodshed—the first condition for the upbuilding of the fleet was fulfilled, something which the natives of the Hanseatic towns and the rest of the north Germans had wished for centuries had come to pass. In silence, an important event had occurred.

Deal Causes Much Criticism.

Had Heligoland been acquired in the chancellorship of Prince Bismarck, it would probably have been valued very highly. Having happened under Caprivi it loosed a lot of criticism. It was merely Caprivi, usurper, who had had the audacity to sit in the prince's chair, and the "irresponsible," "ungrateful," "impulsive" young master who had done such a thing! Had Bismarck only wished, he could have had the old rock any day,but he never would have been so unskillful as to give up to the English for it the very promising African possessions, and he never would have allowed himself to be thus worsted. That was the sort of thing heard almost everywhere. The newspapers of the prince joined loudly in this sort of criticism, to the great grief of the people of the Hanseatic cities.

Curious, indeed, weer the criticisims occasioned by the swapping of Zanzibar and Witu, which appeared in the Bismarckian press, although previously, when I worked under him, these newspapers had always explained that he had not much belief in the value of colonies in themselves and looked upon them merely as objects to be exchanged, possibly, for something else, in deals with the British. His successor acted according to these ideas in the Heligoland question, and was most violently criticized and attacked. Not until the world war was on did I see articles in the German press which unreservedly admitted the acquisition of Heligoland to be an act of far-sighted politics and added reflections as to what would doubtless have happened if Heligoland had not become German.

The German nation has every reason to be thankful to Count Caprivi for this achievement, since thereby the building of its navy and its victory at the Skagerrak were made possible. As for the German navy, it long ago acknowledged this.

The school law of Count Zedlitz aroused violent new conflicts. When they led to Zedlitz's retirement, the cry arose among his adherents: "If the count goes, so must the chancellor."

Caprivi left his post in a calm, dignified manner. He tried honestly, within the measure of his powers and abilities, to continue the traditions of Prince Bismarck. In this he found little support among the political parties, and, for this reason, all the more criticism and hostility in the public and among those who, had they acted for the right and the interests of the state should have stood by him. Without one word of apology, Caprivi, in noble silence, lived all the rest of his life in almost solitary retirement.

U. S. CREDIT MEN WILL MEET HERE

Atlanta has been chosen as the meeting place for the 1923 convention of the National Association of Credit Men, the decision to hold the convention in Atlanta being reached by the executive board of the national association at Atlantic City this week.

A. A. Moody, president of the local association of credit men, attended the meeting of the executive committee in Atlantic City, carrying with him personal invitations from the principal leaders of business, civic and political life in Atlanta. Buffalo was the strongest competitor Atlanta had in bidding for this meeting, and the decision in favor of Atlanta was considered quite a compliment to the city aside from the fact that it is such a material advantage in that it will bring to the city something like 2,500 visitors in June of next year. The Morris Plan club, an organization of financiers, also holds its conventions jointly with the credit men's association.

It was announced from authoritative sources Wednesday that Atlanta had won over Buffalo in bidding for this meeting despite the fact that E. M Statler, hotel magnate, had offered to build a new hotel in Buffalo, to open next June, and turn it over exclusively to the credit men, if they would select that city as their meeting place. This is the first time in 10 years that the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men has been held in the south, and members of the Atlanta convention bureau are particularly gratified over the fact that the matter has finally been decided in favor of this city.

KING IS EXONERATED OF LIQUOR CHARGE

Adoption of a motion exonerating Police Commissioner Andy R. King of the charge of having transported whisky was the official recognition given a letter which Commissioner King read to the board of commissioners at the special call meeting Wednesday night. The letter, which was dated September 18, was from Detective Jack T. Malcolm, and referred to a statement made by the detective at the last meeting of the board on September 12, which, it is said, insinuated that Mr. King had been guilty of transporting liquor.

Commissioner King rose to a point of personal privilege near the end of the meeting Wednesday and asked that the board listen to a reading of the letter, which follows in full, and asked that official recognition be given it, furnishing a copy for use as a part of the record of the meeting.

Dear Mr. King: In justice to yourself as well as in justice to myself, I deem it necessary to explain to you in writing just what was said and what was meant with reference to the unfortunate occurrence before the police board on September 12.

You will remember that I was unexpectedly asked questions before the board by yourself relative to conduct on my part regarding the use of license tags on automobiles being used at the time to apprehend criminals and in the sudden heat of passion and without in the least intending to offend you or any other person, I asked the question of you whether or not you remembered the time in 1916 when you carried five pints of liquor to a nearby town. The papers, I understand, later quoted me as accusing you of transporting this liquor either to or from this particular town, namely, Rutledge, Ga.

I want you to understand, Mr. King, that I did not intend at the time and do not at this time charge you with transporting this liquor or any liquor to this town or any other town to Atlanta.

I am indeed sorry that I was misunderstood and misquoted, and I assure you personally that I hold you in the highest regard and esteem.

You are at liberty to use this letter in any way you see fit.

Respectfully,
JACK T. MALCOM.

Other important developments at the meeting Wednesday was the trial of Officers Robertson and Wiggins, charged with neglect of duty in allowing W. E. Sailors, whom they had arrested, to escape. The two officers were found guilty and suspended from duty for 15 days with a reprimand from Chief Beavers.

Police Sergeant Newton Sheridan, 68 years of age, 45 Pavilion street, was retired on pension. Sergeant Sheridan was the oldest sergeant on the force, having served since March 31, 1881. In 1907 he was made a sergeant under the civil service rules, and recently he was injured in an accident suffering a fracture of the bone in one of his legs near the ankle joint which disabled him for further service.

J. W. Blazer, for 12 years a member of the force, was elected sergeant to succeed Sergeant Sheridan, taking his place on the day watch. Sergeant Blazer is considered one of the most efficient men on the local organization, and in July was decorated with a gold star for service rendered in a shooting affray in which he particularly distinguished himself.

Mrs. C. M. Kenimer was elected on the force a supernumerary policewoman.

A discussion of further improving the traffic tower signal service led to adoption of a motion to instruct the traffic committee to investigate and make recommendation concerning a number of new towers to be built along new and improved plans for locating at points where signal lights have been placed but at which as yet no towers have been provided for the officer on duty.

CLOTHES AND JEWELRY TAKEN BY BURGLARS

Two watches, a few jewelry trinkets, men's and women's clothes were taken in a series of three burglaries Wednesday night.

Those whose homes were entered are: Lindsey Roberts, 190 Luckie street, Clarence Jones, 323-B Bass street, and J. F. Donehue, 182 Stewart avenue.

BOY INJURED IN FALL SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Fred Allen, aged 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen, of 64 Fairbanks avenue, who was injured in a fall from the roof of his home last Monday while at work on a radio aerial will recover, authorities at St. Joseph's infirmary predict. The youth at first was thought to be fatally hurt. He suffered internal injuries, a fractured left arm, an injured spine and a lacerated scalp.

Automobile Burns.

An automobile belonging to Paul Daniel, negro, was burned in a fire originating in the garage belonging to W. H. Whitaker, colored, Wednesday night. The total damage is estimated at $2,000.

Man Missing.

J. T. McCain, Pachuta, Miss., wants information as to the whereabouts of Ully B. Bufkin, who escaped from Veterans' hospital, No. 62, Augusta, on August 30, 1922.

Bufkin is 5 feet 11 inches high, weighs about 145 pounds, is stoop shouldered, blodge with gray eyes and prominent nose. Wears a plain ring engraved "From Julius to Mollie." Usually very secluded in his manner, never talking unless approached. Information leading to his whereabouts will be rewarded and appreciated by J. T. McCain, his guardian.

Hopper's Company Scores Great Success in "Pinafore"

Filled with soft and bewitching melodies, jolly and bubbling ensembles, delicate satire and delicious lampoons the perennially popular "H. M. S. Pinafore" was presented as the fourth offering of the present engagement of De Wolf Hopper's able Gilbert and Sullivan Comic Opera company at the Atlanta theater Wednesday night before a thoroughly pleased and happy audience. Of all the delightful scores of Sir Arthur Sullivan and of all the refreshing nonsense humor of the books and librettos of W. S. Gilbert those of "H. M. S. Pinafore" probably are the best. It is certain that the audience was sent away Wednesday night in the most joyful mood of the company's local engagement.

There is a rollicking lilt and a wealth of light and ironical fun about "Pinafore" that is irresistible. That it was written about a half a century ago and 50 years later can appeal to an audience with such power is a tribute to its fundamental merit. And that it has withstood the butchering and manslaughtering of tens of thousands of amateur opera companies and has retained its general hold on the public is irrefutable evidence of its undying popularity.

In this age of discordant jazz, slapstick comedy, saxaphone syncopation and otherwise deluge of musical malpractice such a revival as that of "Pinafore" comes as a cool and refreshing breeze in a befouled and poisoned atmosphere. It does not require a musical education or anything bordering on the "high brow" to appreciate such an opera. The only requisite to enjoy every moment of an evening of "Pinafore" is a plain, ordinary appreciation of natural melody, clean fun and rippling, chuckly humor.

If the appearance of Mr. Hopper's excellent company in the Gilbert and Sullivan revivals is not successful this week they ought to close up the theaters. Such a company comes but seldom and if there is any amusement lover in Atlanta who fails to grasp an opportunity of hearing one or more of these delightful comic operas sung, such a person deserves no condolence. A rare treat is provided at every performance, judging by the standard set in the first four operas and he who fails to hear them is the loser.

In "H. M. S. Pinafore" Mr. Hopper is not afforded as many opportunities for fun-making as in some of the other operas, but this is not such a drawback as it would appear at first glance. Other able and capable members of the company are given greater range as a result of Mr. Hopper's somewhat limited activities, and this serves to round out one of the most pleasing productions on the entire list.

As "Dick Deadeye" Mr. Hopper provides amusement for the audience, but the bulk of the funmaking rests on the strong shoulders of Arthur Cunningham as "Sir Joseph, K. C. B." first lord of the admiralty and "ruler of the Queen's Navee." All the other old favorite characters are there like old friends. J. Humbird Duffey is "Ralph Rackstraw;" Henry Kelley is "Captain Corcoran;" Miss Bernice Mershon is "Little Buttercup;" good old Herbert Waterous is "Bill Bobstay;" petite and winsome Alice Mackenzie is "Josephine," while Miss Winifred Anglin is a charming "Hebe." The bulk of the singing is done by Mr. Duffey, Mr. Cunningham, Mr. Kelley, Miss Mackenzie and Mr. Waterous.

"Pinafore" is noted for its beautiful ensemble numbers, particularly the finales of the first and second acts. Some pretty duets and trios are sprinkled here and there in the opera with an occasional solo providing the needed relief. The fun is typically Gilbertesque, particularly the "Bab Balladish" libretto. Throughout the entire book keen satire on high officialdom runs and most of this delicious irony is applicable to the lawmaking and governing forces of this country as well as of England where it was first produced half a century ago.

Among the most popular musical numbers are "I'm Little Buttercup," "Which Must I Obey?" "For He's An Englishman," the admiral's song, "We'll Sail the Ocean Blue," "Softly Steal Away" and the good old song about the "sisters and the cousins and the aunts" and "What Never Will Hardly Ever" which delighted people generations ago.

The production of "Pinafore" measured up to the highest standard and maintained the high position it holds in the list of light operas. It will be offered again Saturday afternoon. Thursday night "The Pirates of Penzance" will be presented and on Friday will come the "Yoeman of the Guard," while "The Mikado" will be repeated Saturday night, rounding out the enjoyable series of Gilbert and Sullivan revivals which has brought so much pleasure to Atlanta amusement lovers.

"The Pirates of Penzance."
(At Atlanta Theater.)

Another treat is to be offered music lovers tonight, when De Wolf Hopper and his really remarkable comic opera organization present "The Pirates of Penzance." This is one of the best offerings in the Gilbert & Sullivan repertoire, and Hopper himself is said to be at his best in the part of sergeant of police. The wonderful male chorus of the company will also be much in evidence in this opera.

"The Bat" Coming.

Seat sale opens today for "The Bat," far and away the sensation of the year in the theater from point of popularity, which will be presented by Wagenhals and Kemper at the Atlanta theater, for a return engagement with last season's great cast for the week beginning Monday, October 2, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. "The Bat" is the joint work of Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, reason sufficient in itself for its tremendous success.

"The Bat" is every bit of the dramatic smash one critic called it. One climax after another follows in rapid sequence and the suspense literally holds the audience breathless from curtain to curtain. Nor is that all, for running through their story the authors have succeeded in introducing one of the funniest characters ever seen on the stage. Lizzie, the servant of the household, accounts for shrieks of laughter.

"The Bat" played in New York for over two years. Simultaneously, another company of "The Bat" achieved a run of over one solid year in Chicago, breaking all theatrical records for that city by a matter of many months. This is a record that is positively unique in the annals of the theater.

The story of "The Bar"—that is a secret. It is the request of the authors and the management that no one tell the secret of "The Bat" and there has yet to be a critic or a theatergoer, so far as is known, who has broken faith.

When "The Bat" comes home, the same request will be made of local theatergoers. For the present then, know that "The Bat" is the hit of hits in the theater and that it comes here, presented exactly as it is being played in New York and with a cast of unusual excellence, which includes Lizzie Evans, William L. Thorne, Josephine Morse, Gretchen Thomas, Herbert Delmore, Harry La Cour, Joseph M. Holicky, George Wilson, John Mackenzie and John Graham Spacey.

"East Is West."
(At the Forsyth)

It takes a lot of courage for a stock company to attempt a play like "East Is West" and then they deserve a world of credit for putting it over in the way that the Forsyth Players are doing at the Forsyth this week. "East Is West" is undoubtedly the most difficult thing that this company has attempted since their long and successful stay in this city. Miss Florence Rittenhouse, the charming new leading lady, supplies the one necessary punch to make the Forsyth Players one of the strongest aggregations of its kind now before the public, and Atlanta is fortunate in having this organization within its portals.

Next week the Forsyth Players will present that international comedy-drama success, "Three Wise Fools."

MOVIES

Howard Theater—All week. Thomas Meighan in "Manslaughter," and other screen features.

Metropolitan Theater—All week. Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," and other screen features.

Rialto Theater—All week. "In the Name of the Law," and other screen features.

Criterion Theater—Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Freckles Barry in "Penrod," and other screen features.

Strand Theater—All week. Harry Carey in "The Kick Back," and other screen features.

Keith Vaudeville.
(At the Lyric)

Having enjoyed a most admirable bill for the first half of the week, vaudeville lovers can return to Keith's Lyric the latter half of the week with the pleasurable anticipation of another all-star offering, led by Pietro, the universally beloved virtuoso of the accordion. It is an opportunity seldom afforded and one which will be gobbled up with pardonable rapacity. And on the same bill are Clara Howard, a singer of national repute; Billy (Single) Clifford, a luminary in the minstrel world; Rule and O'Brien in original comedy, and Cook and Valdare in a cycling novelty.

Loew's Vaudeville.
(At the Grand)

With the passing of the excellent show presented at Loew's Grand theater during the first three days of the week, the mid-week change of bill which is in effect today, brings another show promising equally as good entertainment. One of the best acts on the bill will be that of Hickman Brothers and Company, a humorous one act comedy, "Go Get Em." All three members of the cast appear in blackface characters and with rare humor create a skit that is one long laugh from beginning to end.

Schramm and Clarke are termed song delineators and entertain with harmony songs. As both have splendid voices, the offering promises well for lovers of popular music.

Other acts are Bassett and Bailey in "The Unexpected," an acrobatic novelty, LaRose and Adams in songs and sayings and Fitzgerald and Laxton in whistling and bird imitations. The feature of the long screen bill is Bert Lytell in "The Face Between."

"Manslaughter."
(At the Howard.)

"The most lavish scene since 'Joan the Woman!'"

That's what is said of the Roman bacchanal recently staged by Cecil B. DeMille for his latest Paramount production of "Manslaughter."

Several years ago the same producer gave to the screen his classic tale of the Maid of Orleans. At that time thousands of "extras," clad in the picturesque costumes of the period were to be seen daily around the studio and on the massive sets created for that picture.

Since that date there have been many huge scenes filmed at the west coast home of Paramount pictures. But it remained for Cecil B. DeMille to again set a new mark for sheer, spectacular splendor.

"The Eternal Flame."
(At the Metropolitan.)

A lesson for unduly jealous husbands is to be found in Norma Talmadge's magnificent picturization of "The Eternal Flame," the First National attraction playing at the Metropolitan theater this week.

"A woman's loneliness should be respected; not violated."

That is what the Duchess of Langeais, portrayed by Norma, told the Count de Marsay when he begged to comfort her in her loneliness.

After the contrite De Marsay begged her forgiveness, he sought out the Duc de Langeais to tell him: "Your wife's nobility of character shamed and exalted me." De Langeais, profligate that he was, believed De Marsay's remark a trick to conceal his conquest of the Duchess and accused her of accepting the young coxcomb as her lover.

"In the Name of the Law."
(At the Rialto.)

That stout-hearted legion, the police, maligned and lampooned in many of the greatest cities in the country, at least have their inning at the Rialto theater this week, where the thrilling police melodrama "In the Name of the Law" is revealed on the screen.

"In the Name of the Law" gives the policeman a square deal. It puts the guardian of our lives and liberty in the right light. And this for the first time in the history of the screen. "In the Name of the Law," in fact, shines like a mighty beacon of truth.

Presenting not only a stirring and engrossing story "In the Name of the Law" shows in vivid dramatic sequences the fine home life of the average policeman.

"Broadway Rose."
(Coming to Metropolitan)

With Mae Murray in the stellar role of "Broadway Rose," which comes to the Metropolitan theater next week, motion picture fans will see the beautiful Metro star in an elaborate production which is said to surpass even "Peacock Alley" and "Fascination."

As in the latter pictures Miss Murray is provided with a role which gives prominence to her ability as a dancer and affords opportunity for striking costumes in great profusion.

The story concerns a country girl who, by her extraordinary ability as dancer, becomes the idol of Broadway.

"Remembrance."
(Coming to Metropolitan.)

Rupert Hughes' latest picture, a super-production made by the Goldwyn company, may be seen and enjoyed by every member of the family. It is called "Remembrance," and is to be presented week of October 9, at the Metropolitan theater.

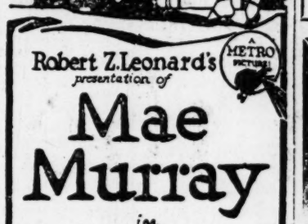

The story deals with just such a family as can be found in any American city—a family that has achieved social and financial success and is branching out with an ambitious flourish. Only the father, "Poor Old Pop," the man who built up a small business into a successful department store remains unspoiled.

Pop is expected to work and pay the bills while the rest of the family have a good time. This is the situation when he collapses under the strain and suffers an illness that threatens his life.

When building large grandstands, such as those at baseball parks, the weight of the crowd's excitement, in addition to the actual weight of the spectators, has to be taken into consideration. The reason for this is that when people are excited, they weight twice as much as when sitting still. A man crouching adds about 65 per cent to his weight in strightening himself up, and it is possible, by rising with a sudden jerk, to momentarily add over 150 per cent to one's weight.

There are 335,212 groceries and delicattessen stores, 48,082 furniture, 35,207 dry goods and 148,885 general stores in this country.

The brass button was first introduced by a hardware manufacturer in Birmingham, England, near the close of the 17th century.

"Pop" Grout didn't even take time off for lunch
A HARD day's work at the office today and a harder one ahead tomorrow. Poor old Pop had his hands full keeping his wife and youngsters in the style to which they had accustomed themselves. The children learned to neglect their old-fashioned dad and even Mother preferred bridge to home life. And then one day the veil was torn from their pleasure-seeking eyes and they saw their father as the grand old man that he was!

THE LEAVEN AT WORK.

The fact that grand jury indictments have recently been returned against alleged members of lynching mobs in several Georgia counties, even though no convictions have followed, is appropriately interpreted by Judge Andrew J. Cobb, of Athens, in a communication published elsewhere upon this page, as constituting a significant "ray of hope" foreshadowing the end of mob law in this state.

Judge Cobb sees in this activity an indication that "grand jurors are awakening to a sense of duty;" that "murder by a number commonly called a mob is being recognized by grand jurors as murder, which it is;" and that "in due time trial jurors will awaken and convict when the evidence authorizes."

The judges of Georgia are rendering good service to that end.

A typical case in point was the splendid charge delivered the other day by Judge Blanton Fortson upon the convening of a grand jury in Barrow county.

After calling attention to the series of instances of mob brutality that have occurred recently in Barrow county, Judge Fortson expressed the opinion that those crimes "have been carried out as a part of some kind of plan or scheme of terrorism."

Conditions, he declared, have developed almost to the point of constituting a "reign of terror" in Barrow county.

"Who is doing this?" he asked the grand jury—

"Is it done by an organized band who have deliberately sought to create a reign of terror, or was it started by men with more or less worthy objects, who undertook to arrogate to themselves the functions of government and have allowed the situation to get beyond their control? Is it being done by men who still believe they can usurp the functions of the courts?"

Then he truthfully declared that—

"If it is done by men obsessed with the idea that they can serenely arrogate to themselves the administration of punishment, they are woefully lacking in the knowledge of history or understanding of human nature."

"The whole trouble," he told the jury, "is that the good citizen, the law-abiding citizen, has allowed the unthinking and vicious to commit these crimes too long, and from lynching negroes for the one gross crime we have taken to lynching them for every other crime, or for no crime at all, and we are now mobbing white men!"

"In God's name," he pleaded, "isn't it time to call a halt?"

"Our laws are all right," he declared—"I think they are; but if they are not, we can amend them. Aren't our juries all right? If not, the remedy is in your hands!"

Continuing, Judge Fortson said:

"We, gentlemen, you and I and the traverse jurors, as well, cannot shirk our responsibility. If we do so, generations yet unborn, if they remember us at all, will look upon us with scorn. The time for temporizing is passed. The men who are responsible for these crimes must be punished. Barrow county must be purged of them, and at last, gentlemen, the initiative, the inherent responsibility, rests upon you to see that the perpetrators of these crimes are brought to the bar of justice. It is unnecessary for me to tell you that the vast majority of the people of Barrow county are upright and law-abiding, and I resent no less than you, any general indictment of the people of your county because of the acts of this lawless minority.

"It is unnecessary for me to tell you that the vast majority of your people have in their hearts condemned these acts with all the fervor of their righteous indignation. It is also unnecessary for me to remind you that they are confidently looking for you to show, in no uncertain and half-hearted way, that murder and anarchy cannot go unpunished.

"Get to the bottom of it, spare no time, no effort, no expense, gentlemen. Sift it thoroughly, fearlessly and impartially. Place the responsibility where it should be placed, and let no guilty man escape. For you have been challenged, gentlemen. Your institutions, constituted authority, the law itself, every law-abiding and God-fearing citizen of your county, has been challenged. You are to accept that challenge and to show to the world that no man, or set of men in Barrow county, is above the law."

This is typical of the sentiment that has characterized the charges delivered by Georgia judges in numerous instances in the recent past; and the results are beginning to be manifested in the finding of bills of indictment.

It will not be long, let us hope, until the consciences of trial jurors will become aroused by a similar sense of duty and of public decency, and convictions will follow indictments.

The leaven is at work in Georgia!

The power of public sentiment is manifesting itself on the side of righteousness, and of law and order.

No man in Georgia has done more toward bringing about this changed condition of the public mind than Andrew J. Cobb.

CONGRESS AND MILEAGE.

Again, it seems, the cupidity of the controlling members of congress asserted itself the other day when they voted to adjourn sine die, instead of declaring a recess as requested by the president.

This action was taken, our Washington correspondent explained in one of his recent dispatches, in order that the members of congress might dip their hands into the federal treasury and take therefrom 20 cents for every mile of distance that separates their respective homes from the capital, which is legal in case of an adjournment but not permitted when a recess is taken.

The president requested congress to recess only, because there are certain proposed acts of legislation—among them the ship subsidy bill, for example—which, he pointed out, should have been disposed of before the recent session came to an end.

Republican members seeking re-election prevailed upon him to let those matters be held in abeyance until after the November election; whereupon the president asked that a recess be taken, so that as soon as the elections are over with congress might reassemble without the necessity of his calling an extraordinary session.

But congress refused to forego the mileage grab privilege and adjourned sine die, regardless of the fact that such action made an extra session immediately following the fall elections virtually inevitable.

This action is characterized by our correspondent as being "one of the most flagrant mileage grabs of members wintessed, perhaps, in a decade—one that will relieve the federal treasury of funds to the tune of thousands of dollars."

Those senators and representatives who are running for re-election will, of course, return to their homes; but most of those who have no political contests on their hands will remain in Washington during the brief time that congress is not in session.

All of them, however—those who stay at the capital as well as those who leave—are entitled under the law to draw on the treasury for 20 cents a mile for the entire distance to their homes, regardless of whether or not they board a railroad train!

There are instances on record in which congress adjourned sine die one day and began a new session on the day following, its members drawing from the disbursing officer what has, for convenience sake, been officially designated "constructive mileage"—mileage paid for by Uncle Sam but never used.

It is right, of course, that the government should pay the railroad fare of the members of congress to and from the capital—but for the people to have to pay a senator or congressman mileage that is never used is another proposition.

This is a form of petty graft that, like the pernicious and expensive franking privilege, ought to be controlled in the interest of economy and the general welfare of the government.

On account of a cloudy sky the total eclipse the other day was a failure from a scientific standpoint, and it is announced that the world will have to wait nine years for another opportunity to prove or disprove Einstein's theory of relativity. Meanwhile the old world must get along the best it can under the circumstances.

Spring street viaduct under way; plans drawn for a twelve-story addition to big down-town hotel; work started on replacement of the structures that were burned in the recent big Whitehall street fire; contract let for new city market building; big new busniess block soon to be built at Spring and Hunter—does that sound like a dull winter for Atlanta?

One can hardly help sympathizing with the republican congressmen seeking re-election when they take the stump and essay to point with pride.

"Dust All That Mars Sunday Auto Trips," says a headline. But what about the road hogs and reckless drivers?

The Near East is a long way off, but it is near enough.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

The Demon Disinfector.

It is usually friend wife who yearns to do something for, and often succeeds in doing it to, friend husband—reduce his steadily increasing girth rate or sneak something into his coffee to make him hate tobacco (whatever the something may be I dunno) or save the last 12 hairs from the drought that is spreading over his beaming calvarium. But we have one to serve up today, ladies, that comes right from the heart of friend husband and whadaya suppose he wants to do? Let me break the news as gently as I can:

Dear doctor:

Have been reading your letters pretty regularly for a long time but have failed to discover any article or advice or suggestion relating to healthful home conditions, if that expresses what I mean. For instance, for some time I have believed that the most sanitary conditions should be maintained in every part of the home, but whenever I have made suggestions along this line to the housekeeper—who happens also to be my wife—she, with some scorn intermingling with a little levity, suggests that I have been reading Dr. Brady again.

No disinfectant is used about the house, save possibly at spring house-cleaning time, for toilets, kitchen sink, garbage receptacles, etc. Carpet sweeper seldom sterilized. I wonder whether lack of such disinfection may not account for friend wife's and mother-in-law's close communion with the doctors?

Please let us have your opinion on this matter. I am anxious to know whether I am on a warm trail or entertaining a foolish idea of what constitutes sanitary conditions in the home.

Respectfully,
E. P. K.

Notice, fellows, how the man dragged in the mother-in-law. I suspect he did that just to win my sympathy—the poor fellow being evidently a perfect stranger to me and my ways. Sympathy? As well ask me for a diagnosis of a prescription.

If the woman who plans 21 meals a week for our correspondent reads this, I pray that she will withdraw her scorn and sober her levity, for to my mind the application of alleged disinfectants to the items named would be extravagant humor. The gentleman never gleaned any such notion from this column. Wouldn't it be silly to sprinkle iodoform in the sink and chloride of lime in the garbage can? Could a man be happy in a home where such fandangles took the place of ordinary cleanliness?

The best disinfectants are sunlight and fresh air. Soap and water cleanliness at all times. There is no scientific or practical reason for using any chemicals which purport to disinfect the home. Even in time of infectious sickness in the home, no chemicals or drugs purporting to destroy germs need be used, if cleanliness and the intelligent isolation of the patient prevails. And finally no disinfection or fumigation or other use of drugs or chemicals following infections disease in necessary or practiced in intelligent communities today, provided cleanliness and proper isolation have been maintained thruout the course of the illness.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

That Terrible Food Combination Secret.

Wish to ask you the name of a book that tells what foods are best to eat and how much poisonous when eaten in combination at the same meal?

T. B. A.

—Answer—I know of no such book that I would recommend. Let me disabuse your mind of the idea that any two or more ordinarily wholesome or edible foods ever become "poisonous" when combined.

Colitis.

Answer—It is with the very intention of being kind to readers that I decline to print the symptoms of any disease or complaint. This is not a long distance diagnostic institution, but a health column. It is far from my province to equip readers with the makings of ailments.

The Baby's Daily Body Wash.

I wish to know how long it is necessary to continue the baby's daily bath. He is now 21 months old.

S. L. F.

Answer—About five minutes on days and as long as half an hour on hot days. Every little tot entitled to nice comfy cooling body wash at least once daily in hot weather. For the rest of the year, babies old enough to control the emunctories may be bathed twice or thrice weekly, in water, but every day with air, this, every tot should have half an hour at least to squirm and kick and play an a blanket with nothing on.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

AN ARTIST OF WORDS.

There are writers who make me not only see what they have written about—but feel the flesh and blood of their characters.

Few masters, outside of Shakespeare, have surpassed Stevenson as an artist of words. "Through no art beside the art of words," says Stevenson, "can the kindness of a man's affections be expressed."

The right word, aptly uttered at the right time—who is there who can resist their appeal?

The "please" of the child, the "goodbye" of a mother, the "thank you" of a friend, the "I love you" of one beloved, the "you can" to him in whom you believe—how words reach into the very depths of our emotions and stir us to heights of happiness and great inspiration!

Take the simple words of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech or his letter to Mrs. Bixby, what beauty of thought, what sympathy, what a negation of self in the expression of great feeling.

Who has not lived over again the great hours of the battle of Waterloo as he has read its matchless description in the words of Hugo in his great work, "Les Miserables"? And who wouldn't be a boy again, if he could be a boy with "Huckleberry Finn"?

But the greatest artist in words is he who has learned how to make people happy by uttering words that have no sting or cut to them—words which warm and ennoble, that encourage and uplift. For better no words at all than those which come with hurt upon their wings.

We take and assume great responsibility just the moment we form words into expressions and send them out into the world.

And these words shall live or die wholly upon the purpose for which they have been uttered. For people would easily forget mere words—but the heart that forms them touches them with an aroma of immortality. And so they live!

Jesus was the greatest artist of words who ever lived. And the greatest word He ever uttered was that of service—greater even than that of love, for love is meaningless unless it is made to live in service.

It is well to think twice before you speak your words. And then it is well to be definite and honest in what you say—not forgetting to make your words to walk out into the light filled with kindness.

Judge Cobb Sees Hope in Grand Jury Mob Indictments

Editor Constitution: Lynchers have been indicted in Oconee, Schley, Monroe, Bibb, Liberty and possibly other counties which have escaped my attention.

Grand jurors are awakening to a sense of duty.

Murder by a number of men, commonly called a mob, is being recognized by grand jurors as murder, which it is and has ever been. In due time trial jurors will awake and convict when the evidence authorizes and it will in most cases.

A great day it will be when all grand jurors, trial jurors and the public all unite in one purpose: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property except by due process of law, nor be deprived of the equal protection of the laws; and the administration of the law shall be impartial and complete."

The Dyer bill will die beyond the hope of resurrection when that day arrives.

Until then the Dyer bill with its usurping, invalid features will continue to be agitated.

Radium, according to C. V. A. Benner, agent of the Radium company, who made the sale, exists in a deposit covering 200 square miles in southwest Colorado and eastern Utah.

ON THE ATLANTIC

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

On the Atlantic, September 27.—On the bulletin board under "Lost" this morning some punster had written: "One whale of an appetite." There were also eleven wireless messages posted for Mr. Clark. He was married in Paris the day the boat sailed. His wife went up in Cherbourg for some trinkets and the tender pulled out without her. So Mr. Clark is having a brideless honeymoon.

There is a gentleman aboard who reached the age of 40 without ever tasting intoxicating liquors of any sort. Then he went to Paris. This morning at breakfast his fare consisted of a bottle of green chartreuse. And he regaled us with his favorite song. They put him to bed before lunch—still singing.

The supreme beauty of the sea is in watching the sun rise. This morning near the captain's bridge a group of early risers gazed at the golden glimmer on the sparkling water. In the party was a rather hardened passenger who spends most of his time at the gaming table. As the beauty of the scene burst upon him he said to a friend: "I'm going to church next Sunday."

It reminded me of the old story of the two gamblers at sea. One bet the other he could not repeat the Lord's prayer. "Now I lay me down to sleep," began the first, but he was interrupted by the second at this point with: "Take the money, I didn't think you knew it."

Before lunch I went up in the wireless house. The operator is a very young Englishman. As the electric crackling and flashing exploded all about him he was reaching down with one hand to stroke the ship's cat. He did not appear to thrill to the romance of his job. It seems to me to be the most important on the ship.

At dusk this evening a pervading gloom settled over the passengers. One of the electricians was fatally stricken at his work. Tomorrow afternoon he will be buried at sea. Every seaman, I am told, even if stricken near land, desires burial in the watery depths.

A touch of human interest came to my notice as I was leaving the swimming pool today. The pool is on the same deck with the third-class passengers. I saw a prosperous gentleman who is traveling first-class standing at the gates that bar the third-class from other parts of the ship. He was inquiring for his father of a ship officer. The son was a Russian and was bringing his father to America. He explained that the father desired to travel third-class because it would give him a chance to mingle with many from his native land who spoke his language.

A wireless from Frank O'Malley, who is on the Homeric ahead of us, today: "How are things?" His reply was: "On the up and up."

The ship's newspaper today reports in its leading article that Canada's exports are growing. What most of want to knew is: Has Babe Ruth knocked another one?

I haven't seen my table companion, who has crossed fifty-eight times since the storm yesterday. I may be wrong, but I have a hunch he is down in his stateroom figuring out some more rumors.

At the boxing bouts on the upper deck late this afternoon two of the toughest mugs I have ever seen were matched. They came from the East End of London. They danced about for several minutes and finally one let go a Jack Dempsey from the ankle and his opponent spat out four teeth. The captain stopped it right there. They were just little bit too rough for refined company. The next bout was too gentlemanly. The contestants appeared to be playing tag and most of the spectators slowly departed.

FIRE PREVENTION PLANS ANNOUNCED IN CITY CAMPAIGN

Governor Thomas W. Hardwick and mayors throughout the state have issued proclamations setting aside the week of October 2 to 9 as "Fire Prevention Week" in Georgia.

The object of its observance is to emphasize and re-emphasize the lessons on fire prevention and control in order that fire losses may be minimized or prevented.

Plans for a local observance of the week were announced Wednesday by W. Julian Thomas, president of the Atlanta Board of Fire Underwriters, embracing about forty of the leading fire insurance agencies in the city.

In schools, children will give special study to the subject of how to prevent fires. They will be taught during periods to set aside for this study, how to turn in a fire alarm, how to extinguish a small blaze and how to use a fire extinguisher.

Fire prevention posters will be exhibited by local merchants in their show windows and by the Georgia Railway and Power company in street cars. Radio talks will also be a feature of the week's observance.

GIRL IS IMPROVING AFTER CAR COLLISION

Bertha Watts, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Watts, of 91 Lovejoy street, who had her nose fractured Tuesday afternoon at Marietta street and Bellwood avenue in a collision between the machine her father was driving and a motor truck, Wednesday was reported resting comfortably.

The accident is believed by the police to have been caused by a defect in the brakes of the car Mr. Watts was driving. They seemed to have tightened suddenly, causing the auto to skid and smash against the truck which was standing beside the curb.

PITHY PARAGRAPHS

Pithy Paragraphs are coming in from all quarters. No matter where the contributor lives, in town or out, every offering stands on its own merits as a prize-winner.

But friend paragrapher, don't copy. The editor is on a still hunt for lifted material and his waste basket is crying for help.

There is no dearth of jokes in Atlanta when so much spontaneous humor is going off everywhere. It's just a matter of taking hold of the good ones you hear and sending them in to the Pithy Paragraph editor. It will mean two tickets to the Howard theater if your joke is one of the two best printed in this column that day. It will mean $5 more if the Howard film editor takes it for his Pithy Paragraph screen column. See that film. It's the funniest one you ever saw; it will knock you right off your chair. Send your joke in and get paid for laughing and making others laugh.

LAMENT.

For tickets two my brain is bled;
At night they dance within my head,
And mock me, huddled in my chair,
Waiting for inspiration there,
That I shan't get them is my dread.

Ah! the bright quips that can't be said
And some like ghosts rise from the dead:
"Now have I heard this one somewhere?"
For tickets two.

I take another gag instead,
And write it down, but when it's read
How dull it sounds, how bleak and bare,
My lofty brow is lined with care;
I work when I should be in bed,
For tickets two.

MARY'S LAMB AGAIN.

Mary had a little lamb.
That time has passed away.
No lamb could follow up the gaits
That Mary goes today.

She gads about upon the streets,
In skirts too short by half;
No lambkin shares her daily strolls,
But you can see her calf.

But who is there that can complain,
Or cry in woe, alas!
So long as Mary's calf's all right
The lamb can go to grass.

To him is quite the proper way
To propagate his creed.

He makes the sisters wear long shrouds
Whene'er they take a swim;

The law attends to him.

A convert does not dare to laugh,

I know a man who rants and tears
'Bout fellows who're ashamed to work;
Who pick soft and high-brow jobs,

THE RECIPE.

Take a powder puff
And a vanity case,
Add a lip-stick red
Spread on the face.

Take a fluffy bob
With a permanent wave,
Add sparkly barrettes
To make it behave.

Use a short skirt for dressing,
Silk stockings quite dapper;
High-heeled little slippers—
Mix up—there's the flapper!

EXIT FLAPPERS.

Exit all the flappers bold,
Styles as in the days of old;
Back again to stay a bit,
Though we try to throw a fit
Just because the skirts have dropped,
And the rolling stockings stopped.
Painted cheeks now "take the air";
We no longer bob our hair.
Just for style we do this, dears,
As we shed our flapper tears.

SMITH IS NAMED FOR SENATE PLACE

E. M. Smith, prominent Henry county attorney and former state senator from the old 34th district, was nominated to fill this position in the new 35th district at a meeting of the state senatorial committee of the 35th district at the Ansley hotel yesterday. Mr. Smith has no opposition for the position in November elections.

E. M. SMITH,
Senatorial nominee from the thirty-fifth district.

The convention also went on record as endorsing Mr. Smith for president of the state senate. He has not yet announced his candidacy, but stated following the meeting that he has it under consideration.

Mr. Smith will be the first state senator from Henry county since the new 35th district, composed of Henry, Fulton and Clayton counties, was formed by statute enacted in 1918. Prior to that time he was a member of the upper house of the legislature as senator from the 34th district, which, before the new law was enacted, was composed of Henry, DeKalb and Gwinnett counties. The old 35th district was composed of Cobb, Fulton and Clayton countries.

Mr. Smith is one of the ablest lawyers in the state and has given many years of his life to public work. Born in Monroe county, he is a graduate of Emory university and later read law under Judge O. H. B. Bloodworth, of the state court of appeals. He was admitted to the bar in Forsyth, Ga., in 1894 and in 1897 moved to McDonough.

In January, 1900, Mr. Smith was elected mayor of McDonough, a position he held continuously for 15 terms. In the fall of the same year he was first elected to the house of representatives from Henry county, serving one term.

In 1902 Mr. Smith was appointed solicitor of the county court of Henry by Governor Terrell. He held this position continuously until 1908. In 1910 he was elected to the house of representatives again, serving in the sessions of 1911-12. In 1914 Mr. Smith was elected to the state senate from the 34th district and during the 1915-16 sessions of that body he was chairman of the constitutional amendments committee, at the same time serving on many of the most important committees in that body.

The senatorial convention which nominated Mr. Smith to be Henry county's first representative in the state senate since it's inclusion in the new 35th district, is composed of delegates appointed by the democratic executive committees of the counties composing the district. Paul Turner, of Henry county, presided at the meeting, while Frank T. Reynolds, from Fulton county, acted as secretary. Others attending the convention were: T. J. Brown, R. L. Turner, R. O. Arnold, A. C. Norman and J. R. Hightower, of Henry county; O. J. Coogler, W. H. Reynolds and J. E. Mundey, of Clayton county; E. E. Pomeroy, Harvey Hill, John Y. Smith, James J. Lowry, D. F. McClatchey, Mrs. Ed Alexander and Miss Bessie Kempton, of Fulton county.

Bright Outlook Seen for Mercer At Fall Opening

Macon, Ga., September 27.—(Special.)—With addresses by John T. Boifeuillet, of the Georgia Public Service commission, and members of the faculty, a welcome by Mayor Luther Williams, adoption of resolutions expressing sympathy for Mrs. Thomas E. Watson in the death of her husband and the announcement of a new graduate school with Dr. Percy Scott Flippin as dean, Mercer university began its eighty-ninth annual session here today.

The enrollment had reached the 700 mark, excluding 100 who have applied for admission to the night school of commerce. There are about 200 students yet to register. This is by far the largest enrollment in the history of the Baptist institution.

Class work will begin Friday morning, but the students will meet instructors tomorrow morning for assignments.

Congressman W. D. Upshaw, who was to have made an address, joined the Watson funeral party at Thomson and was unable to come to Macon. In his address, Mr. Boifeuillet paid a marked tribute to President Rufus W. Weaver of Mercer.

NEW MARKET BUILDING WORK TO BEGIN TODAY

Atlanta civic leaders will gather at 10:30 this morning on the site of the former governor's mansion to participate in the commencement of building operations of Atlanta's new market building which will occupy that site.

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, will turn the first spadeful of earth, following which short talks will be made by Mayor Key, George M. Hope, chairman of the Fulton county board of commissioners, and others representing the various civic organizations, the chamber of commerce and the advertising club. Moving pictures of the exercises will be made, and will be shown at the Howard theater during the coming week.

According to J. R. Regnas, general manager of the market company, approximately three weeks will be necessary to complete the excavation for the new building, due to the large amount of basement cold storage space which will be required. One of the features of the market will be that all perishable foodstuff, either in storage or on display, will be under refrigeration. Following this, the building will be erected as rapidly as possible.

A novel feature of the building will be a refrigerated auditorium which will seat from 1,000 to 1,200 people, and which may be used as well for indoor games, banquets, balls and gatherings of every nature.

HIGH ANNIVERSARY SALE OPENS TODAY

With five floors bristling with tremendous new stocks bought ahead of the tariff at low price advantages, the fortieth anniversary sale of the J. M. High company, on Whitehall street, will open this morning to continue for 30 days.

The great sale opens simultaneously with a general return toward booming business conditions, and while the eastern and other big merchandising markets of the country are crowded with buyers who had been hesitant to purchase at lower prices while the depression lasted.

All the experience and knowledge acquired by the company's officials in former anniversary sales, which have been important events to the purchasing-public, were employed in executing plans for the present anniversary occasion.

The store is appropriately and beautifully decorated. Departments are a panorama of apparel and things of the home to set feminine hearts a-flutter, and men's tastes in neckties and other masculine lines have been as carefully provided for.

Weeks of Planning.

W. H. Brittain, manager of the store, and other officials of the company, spent weeks in the markets selecting the stocks for the special anniversary event.

Free from the cost effects of the new tariff, beautiful Oriental rugs, imported laces, linens, hosiery, gloves, handkerchiefs, ladies' fancy hand bags and jewelry, will be placed on sale, according to Mr. Brittain.

"Our entire buying organization has been unusually fortunate in procuring just the right merchandise at the most advantageous prices," he said, "and we believe our offerings at this time are most remarkable values."

Rug Display.

"To those who have not visited High's fourth floor recently," he continued, "this department will be a revelation. This floor has been completed the full length of the building and now consists of over 10,000 square feet of floor space, completely stocked with beautiful Oriental and domestic rugs, draperies, window shades and other furnishings.

"The firm's policy, put into practice 40 years ago by its founder, J. M. High, is still followed," Mr. Brittain added. "All merchandise must be right. The quality must be there. The firm has an absolute iron-clad rule not to buy seconds or doubtful merchandise of any kind. The firm's guarantee is back of all transactions.

"This policy, inaugurated by the founder, has given the business a solid, steady growth through the many years until it is now an Atlanta institution."

$75,752 SUIT FILED AGAINST ARTHUR CAIN

The Insurance Company of North America filed suit Wednesday in the Fulton superior court to recover $75,752 alleged to have been embezzled by Arthur H. Cain, who disappeared recently when warrants charging embezzlement were issued against him. The company, through its attorney, Elliot Cheatham, asks that a receiver be appointed to take charge of property owned by Cain.

Defendants named in the suit are Mrs. Amrette J. Cain, the Fourth National bank, Fulton National bank, Atlanta National bank, the firm of Kenan & Cain, Charles Jenkins, Edward B. Havis, Jr., and Arthur H. Cain.

A receiver is asked to take charge of a residence, furs, jewels and other assets of Cain which are alleged to have been transferred. It is charged that Cain deposited money in several banks under a fictitious name and used checks on these banks to conceal the ownership of the funds he used.

Would Bar General Use of Tax Records For Commercialism

The tax committee will seek legislation at the next meeting of city council to bar from using the records in the office of municipal tax assessor persons gathering information for commercial purposes.

Councilman J. C. Murphy and Councilman J. A. Couch, members of the tax committee, are especially opposed to this practice, which, they declare, is going too far with the public records, and their use of the books seriously interferes with the clerks in their work.

Individuals or their agents searching for information on property in which they are directly concerned will not come under the proposed ban, it is said. At a session of the tax committee Wednesday, it was decided to offer a resolution to curb unrestricted access to the tax assessor's books.

GEORGIANS ENROLL IN MARINE CORPS

Nine Georgians were accepted for a three years' enlistment in the United States marine corps Wednesday and were transferred to the training camp at Parris Island, S. C., by Captain George Bower, recruiting officer, at room 510 postoffice building.

Officials Probe Dynamite Find On Street Car

City authorities Wednesday were investigating a package containing four sticks of dynamite, discovered where it had been abandoned on an Inman yard street car shortly before midnight Tuesday night. Conductor Sam DeFrese, of the Georgia Railway and Power company, in charge of the car, found the package on his car while near the Inman yards. He notified Chief Dispatcher W. H. Flury, of the power company, who turned over the package to Patrolman A. C. Sinyard.

Under the laws of Georgia it is a violation to transport dynamite or other explosives by way of public utilities, and police expressed the belief that the person who abandoned the explosives Tuesday night was aware of the fact that he was violating the law by carrying it aboard a street car. In view of the fact that the explosives were discovered near the Inman yards, police officers think that the dynamite was abandoned by a person who was intending to use it for blowing up property in that district.

On the other hand it is pointed out that the person who left the dynamite in the car might only have contemplated doing some blasting of a perfectly legitimate nature, such as digging a well or breaking up rocks. But because of the fact that the package was found late at night, and in the district mentioned, authorities are inclined to the belief that it was not intended for legitimate uses.

The four sticks of dynamite were wrapped in a sack, and lying beside this package was a package containing a number of ears of green corn.

During the past several weeks conditions in the vicinity in which the dynamite was found Tuesday night have led to a very close vigilance on the part of local police department of justice officials and others in charge of law enforcement. On several occasions violence has almost broken out in this section, and these facts are mentioned by the authorities in advancing the theory that the dynamite was abandoned because some would-be bomb thrower lost his nerve at the last moment and decided to get away.

BOYS WHO KILLED YOUTH ARE PUT ON PROBATION

Judge John D. Humphries of the Fulton superior court, Wednesday placed on probation nine boys ranging in age from 14 to 18 years, who were charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Charley Stanley, 16 years old, who was struck by rocks while escorting a girl home on Sunday night, May 5, near McCall's crossing. The boys entered pleas of guilty.

In suspending the court sentence and putting the boys on probation, Judge Humphries made one of the strongest talks ever made from a court bench in Atlanta. He urged the boys to go back to their homes and lead clean and upright lives.

The boys under probation are Bert Baisden, Oliver Peck, Preston Heard, Charlie Cook, Clifford Fain, Flournoy Mann, Buren Farlow, Lamar Gower and Frank King.

The Stanley lad was escorting a young woman home from a church when he was attacked by a crowd of boys who "rocked" him because of his attentions to the girl. He was struck by two stones and died a few hours later at his home.

J. A. SELLERS GIVEN ONE TO THREE YEARS

J. A. Sellers, found guilty of involuntary manslaughter by a jury in criminal division of Fulton superior court Wednesday morning in connection with the death on July 5 of W. E. Strickland, in a boarding house at 85 East Hunter street, was sentenced by Judge Humphries to serve from one to three years in the penitentiary.

Notification of an appeal for a new trial was forthcoming by Spence & Spence, attorneys for the defendant. After deliberating since late Tuesday afternoon and apparently deadlocked on the case, the jury reached a verdict shortly before noon Wednesday.

The indictment against Sellers charged murder but he was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter. An hour before reaching this verdict the jury requested Judge Humphries for a recharge of the law governing justifiable homicide.

The trial of Sellers was begun early Tuesday morning and by 5 o'clock in the afternoon the case was left with the jury. Five hours later the jurors, failing to agree on a verdict, went to bed at the Hotel Ansley, with 10 in favor of conviction of involuntary manslaughter and two against this verdict, it was learned from an authentic source.

The crime for which Sellers was convicted is alleged to have followed a drinking party in celebration of July 4, in the rooming house where the principals resided. W. E. Strickland was stabbed to death in a fight with Sellers, who claimed he acted in self defense. Sellers, on the stand in his own defense, declared he attempted to leave the room in which Strickland, his brother and several others were talking, when he was attacked. He says he used a pocket knife fearing for his life and seeing no other way out of the difficulty.

MACON BOY RIDING BICYCLE ON WAY TO CALIFORNIA

"A trip to California!" Doesn't that sound interesting, and wouldn't most anyone like to go—but what does it suggest? To the mere man it would most likely suggest a question as to several hundred dollars for expenses, and to the members of the fair sex it would probably bring up problems of clothes, clothes, shopping and then some more shopping—elaborate preparations for such an extended trip.

But to J. S. Wilson, a former resident of Macon, Ga., it evidently presented nothing more exciting than a little bicycle ride—just a matter of pedoling 4,000 miles. He has already made 100 miles of it, or thereabouts, and this first leg of his journey has left him with two perfectly good legs, neither of them a bit sore he announced Tuesday when he called at the chamber of commedce to pay his respects to the city of Atlanta through that organization.

"I left Macon this morning," stated Mr. Wilson, "and pedaled in here about 1 o'clock this afternoon. I will leave for Rome in the morning, on my way to Chattanoga. I intend to go by Nashville, Louisville, St. Louis and Kansas City. After I leave Kansas City I suppose I will hit the Santa Fe trail, and I'm told that there is some wonderful pedaling roads between there and Los Angeles. Hills, I mean mountains and rough roads. But I'm getting along fine so far, and I guess my Columbia will take me right along."

Mr. Wilson stated that he was going to Los Angeles for the purpose of securing employment. He was formerly connected with the H. P. West Music company.

RICHARDSON ANSWERS CHARGES BY CHAPMAN

In a sharp reply to further charges of H. K. Chapman cancerning the registration of voters in Fulton county and in the city of Atlanta Tax Collector W. S. Richardson declared Wednesday that Chapman's name did not appear on the state and county lists as a voter because he was eliminated by the county board of registrars as a delinquent taxpayer.

Mr. Richardson said the records showed that Chapman's 1921 taxes were not paid until June 9, which prevented his voting in a state or county election. In reply to Chapman's statement that he voted in the city elections, Mr. Richardson explained that he qualified for these elections on August 7, the last day for qualification, and that this qualification did not permit him to vote in state and county elections.

In reply to the charge of Chapman that he was the only man in the fourth ward who was not permitted to vote in the state election for nonpayment of taxes, Mr. Richardson said there were thirty-seven voters in that ward who were disqualified by the county board of registrars. Mr. Richardson said he has nothing to do with the action of this board.

Continuing, Mr. Richardson said:

In today's Constitution, H. K. Chapman is quoted as stating that his taxes for 1921 were paid for him and that I failed to credit the amount. This accusation is like some other of his wild and exaggerated statement regarding 4,000 people being left off the registration list and is absolutely false—the records speak for themselves and are not manipulated to suit Mr. Chapman or anyone else; as a matter of fact, I received a check from A. P. Herrington on June 9, last, in payment of Mr. Chapman's taxes for 1921 and the records in my office show that the fi.fs. was transferred to A. P. Herrington on that same day. Mr. Chapman's name could not possibly remain on the permanent registration list, to which he refers, as his name was eliminated by the board of registrars on account of his being a delinquent taxpayer.

In speaking of the permanent registration list to Mr. Chapman, I told him that the paper had misquoted me in saying that I did not receive a permanent registration list from my predecessor but that in my opinion it was incomplete.

FIDDLING FEUD WILL BE DECIDED HERE THIS WEEK

"Moonshine Blues," a song of the Blue Ridge, inspired by the passage and enforcement of the eighteenth amendment in those parts, will be the music hit of the old fiddlers' convention in the auditorium Friday and Saturday evenings. At least this was the confident prediction of "Fiddlin' John" Carson, of Fannin county, Friday, via telegraph to Virgil W. Shepard, secretary of the Old Fiddlers' association.

But even if "Fiddlin' John" did compose that selection and even if he does believe it will win him the fiddling championship of Georgia, one W. G. Keith, of Gainesville, hitherto unknown fiddling star of the mountains, is of a different opinion. He, and not "Fiddlin' John," will win the championship, Mr. Keith declared in a letter to Mr. Shepard in no modest terms.

Despite the north Georgia "fiddling feud" that has developed over him, "Fiddlin' John" still expresses confidence that the victory of the convention will be his.

Hoke Smith Named By Legislature For Senate Place

Following the receipt of several inquiries concerning the manner in which Senator Hoke Smith was first named to fill that position an investigation was made at the capitol Wednesday which disclosed the fact that he was elected United States senator in 1911 by the legislature. He had just been elected governor in 1910, and took office in 1911 as governor. When the legislature met he was elected United States senator by that body, according to information obtained from Secretary of State S. G. McLendon.

The legislature named him as senator to succeed Joseph M. Terrell, who had been appointed ad interim senator by Governor Joseph Brown to succeed United States Senator A. S. Clay, who died in 1910. Senator Terrell served a short time prior to the meeting of the legislature of 1911, when he and Senator Smith, who was at that time governor, ran as candidates before the legislature, Smith winning. As governor, Senator Smith at that time controlled the party machinery, according to Secretary McLendon, and he opposed the calling of a primary to name a successor for the unexpired term of Senator Clay.

The next vacancy in the United States senate came in 1913, when Senator Bacon died. A law had been passed in the meantime making it the duty of the governor to order a special election to name a successor. An election was held, and Governor Hardwick, John M. Slaton, Rufus Hutcheson and Thomas B. Felder ran as candidates. No candidate received a majority, and the fight was thrown into the Macon convention, where Governor Hardwick won out. Since that time the present law was passed which covers all contingencies, providing that the governor shall name a senator to serve until the next regular election for federal representatives is held, which is every two years.

Governor Thomas W. Hardwick telegraphed his office Wednesday that he is on his way to Georgia from Quebec, where he had gone for a short vacation. He had intended staying in Canada until October 10, but the death of Senator Watson caused him to return sooner than he had planned to take up the question of naming a successor. William J. Vereen, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, was at the office of the governor Wednesday, but said he did not care to discuss plans for filling the senatorial vacancy until after the funeral of Senator Watson.

Partisan Politics In Post Offices Gone, Says Work

Washington, September 27.—Partisan politics in the management of the postal service has given way during the present administration to sympathetic personal co-operation between the postmasters of the country and the central department, Postmaster General Work declared today in addressing the opening session here of the National Association of Postmasters. The association will be in session three days and will be addressed by a number of high officials.

Dr. Work declared he had "come to learn that among the postmasters could be found men of the highest type." He said his chief concern was "the theory and practice of managing and directing the policy of the department for the individual."

"Those of you who are now in office," he continued, "have or soon will realize that the postmaster is the most necessary business man in his community, that he should know something about more things than any other business man of his community. I would urge you to familiarize yourselves with the mailing features of every business in your town.

"Organization is the key to success in the postoffice business, as is everything else for that matter. Good organization in a postoffice cannot be had through the push button system. Supervision is the key to it, but you must work through your supervisors from both ends of the line and make yourselves accessible to the humblest employee."

Edward A. Purdy, of Minneapolis, president of the association, in his address convening the convention, expressed a wish that the organization back the postmaster general in an effort to take the postoffice out of politics, saying that the percenage of democrats and republicans made little difference so long as the public was given an honest and efficient administration. He also suggested that the postmaster general invited the association to appoint a representative to become a member of his regular staff and that both outgoing and incoming business is considered in fixing postmasters' salaries.

Opinions Differ On Mimic Aerial Battle Results

Norfolk, Va., September 27.—Diametrically opposite opinions developed among observing officers as the result of the maneuvers off the Virginia capes this morning when a squadron of torpedo planes searched out three ships of the Atlantic fleet and theoretically destroyed one of them.

Seven hits were registered out of the seventeen torpedoes discharged, all finding their mark on the "Arkansas."

In the opinion of Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the naval air service, Commander T. G. Ellyson, of the air service, navy department and C. H. Danforth, army air service, commandant of Langley Field, Va., the test was satisfactory in all respects, demonstrating they claim that planes equipped with torpedoes can successfully attack battleships from the surface especially if protected by a smoke screen or fog.

Navy Officers' Views.

Naval officers attached to the battle fleet on the other hand contend that today's experiments only proved that the planes are effective within a limited radius from their base and that the two squadrons could have been annihilated before reaching striking distance of the dreadnaught had the battleships been protected by the usual screens of destroyers. They also contend that the secondary batteries of the warships under battle conditions could have blown to atoms every plane before it had an opportunity to discharge its destructive cargo.

Eighteen planes participated in the mimic battle but one failed to discharge its missile. The test was staged under ideal weather conditions.

Promptly at 5 o'clock the flagship Wyoming, with Admiral J. D. McDonald, commander-in-chief of the battleship force of the Atlantic fleet on board and the superdreadnaughts Arkansas and North Dakota got under way and headed out to sea. After steaming three hours the fleet reached the rendezvous about fifty miles off the capes and awaited the attack by the planes.

Sight Dirigible.

At 9:20 the lookouts on the flagship sighted the naval dirigible C-7 which was followed shortly afterwards by a flotilla of scout planes and others carrying observers.

At 10:18 the first squadron of nine torpedo planes arrived on the horizon and the battleships put on forced draught and began maneuvering at full speed, to keep the attacking force astern. General quarters were sounded on all the ships and they were cleared for action and all of the guns trained on the rapidly advancing "enemy." As the second squadron of torpedo laden fliers drew near Admiral McDonald jockeyed his ships so as to avoid the enemy force, keeping one squadron ahead and the other astern.

The dreadnaughts went into battle with the target ship, the Arkansas, in the center of the line, the distance between the three warships preventing a broadside. Changing their tactics the planes attacked on the flanks of the fleet and concentrated on the Arkansas, scoring their first hit on the starboard quarter. The angle was kept on the other two battleships constantly maneuvering at full speed. The flagship narrowly escaped being hit by clever maneuvering on the part of the navigators and the North Dakota also escaped theoretical destruction by a slim margin.

Guns Silent.

Commander Bartlett of the attacking force maneuvered his planes around the warships seeking every opportunity to strike a vital spot and frequently succeeded.

The crews of the battleships handicapped by the absence of supporting destroyers were forced to defend themselves with their rudders, their guns being silent.

Two of the planes were forced down after the test, their gasoline tanks becoming empty after they had passed the capes on their return to the naval base here. The battleship Delaware was scheduled to take part in the maneuvers, but instead remained at anchor.

WOMAN IS URGED FOR WATSON SEAT BY CLUB LEADER

Macon, Ga., September 27.—(Special.)—Appointment of Mrs. W. H. Felton, of Cartersville, to succeed Senator Thomas E. Watson was urged upon Governor Thomas W. Hardwick today by Mrs. James E. Hays, of Montezuma, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Hays sent a wire to the governor which said: "In making an appointment to the senate vacancy, why not name a woman? May I suggest the name of Mrs. W. H. Felton, of Cartersville?"

Mrs. Hays, in Macon on business, said that she believed such an appointment would meet with the approval of women over the state.

If Mrs. Felton were named she would be the first woman senator. She has long been a prominent figure in the state. Her husband was for many years congressman from Georgia. She has been a staunch advocate of Mr. Watson all during his career and has also been a close friend of Governor Hardwick.

GEORGE MAY MAKE RACE TO SUCCEED SENATOR WATSON

Ashburn, Ga., September 27—(Special.)—It is understood that a large number of leaders in this section are urging Walter F. George, of Vienna, who formerly was a member of the court of appeals and also served on the supreme court bench, to make the race for the senate to fill the unexpired term of Thomas E. Watson.

Mr. George is well known in south Georgia from his wide law practice, aside from the offices of note that he has filled. It is not announced whether he will make any steps in this direction.

L. J. Andrews was found guilty of assault and battery upon M. L. Rigdon, and Lewis Rushing was convicted of an assault upon Will Burt.

'COMMERCE CHAMBER' WEEK NOW PLANNED

Adoption of a resolution formally endorsing plans for conducting a "Chamber of Commerce week," designating the first week in November, was one of the features of a varied program disposed of by the board of directors of the chamber of commerce at their regular meeting Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock. Fourteen new members were received, a number of addresses and resolutions endorsing fire prevention week, October 2 to 9, and a number of other important matters were given attention at the meeting.

Plans for conducting a chamber of commerce week, it was announced, were adopted for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the public the many important things this organization is doing for the city. The program will start with a general "house-warming," at which time attention will be given to the $25,000 improvements lately finished in the chamber of commerce building. An engraved manuscript expressing the appreciation of the board of directors and bearing the names of all directors will at this time be presented to W. S. McKemie, in charge of the chamber building, as a tribute to his unselfish service to the organization in the matter of effecting the improvements in the building and handling other matters of importance for the chamber of commerce.

To Address Civic Bodies.

Throughout the week designated as chamber of commerce week, a speaker representing the organization will appear at every meeting of a civic body held in the city, according to plans, and on these occasions attention will be called to the record of achievement for the city and business in general, with explanations of how the body has been able to do these things for Atlanta.

Posters will be furnished for display in the windows of members, and on the poster will be given the names of those from that house who are members, beginning with the senior members, then the junior members and then the members of the woman's division. The caption of these posters will convey the message that the organization displaying them is solidly behind the plans and purposes of the chamber of commerce, and that the names given are the members from that business who render personal co-operation to the chamber.

Support will be given the Atlanta Board of Fire Underwriters in the fire prevention week, it was stated. Chamber of commerce officials stated that they would cooperate with this movement by furnishing wide publicity to facts relating to methods of preventing fire and reasons for everyone being extremely careful to prevent loss from this source. In the proclamation from Governor Hardwick, it was stated that in the five years ending in 1920, Georgia suffered a loss of $37,725,926 from fires, and the necessity of arousing the public to the situation in order that this enormous waste might be stopped, will be stressed.

Getsinger Speaks.

B. G. Getsinger, district manager of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, appeared before the board and discussed the aims of this organization in stimulating foreign trade in Atlanta and this section, including the entire southeast. He stated that he used the cables freely in ascertaining actual business conditions in all foreign countries, and gave items as to different commodities needed. He stated that his bureau desired to be a real help to manufacturers and business in general.

John L. McDougal, recently appointed local circulation manager for The Nation's Business, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, addressed the board relative to his purpose in Atlanta. His object was to create in the minds of business men a broader vision of the purposes of the national body and establish a more thorough understanding of its functionings.

Resolutions endorsing the plan of having the Bankhead highway across the continent passing through Atlanta, kept entirely separate and apart from the Lee highway, were endorsed.

A committee to confer with the executive committee of the chamber of commerce in working out details for putting over the chamber of commerce week was appointed. Julian Boehm is chairman, and serving with him are Alfred C. Newell and Miss Mabel Kendrick.

Following are the new members received at the meeting Wednesday: Berry Collins & Co., S. C. Parker, representative; Fulton Metal Bed Mfg. Co., L. C. McKinney, representative; Tripod Paint Co., increased from one to two memberships; Atlanta Foreign Trade club, H. O. Mitchell, representative; A. Q. Patterson, W. B. Lowe, Ralph Reed, C. A. Rauschenberg, Jr., Paul R. Horne, representative; Templar Motor Sales Co., James N. Joyner, representative; Gholstin Spring & Mattress Co., E. F. Johnson and L. D. White, representatives; W. H. Hill Insurance agency, Inc., W. D. Greene, representative; Cecil Meyer.

BUSINESS BETTER AS STRIKE'S END MOVES MORE CARS

Savannah, Ga., September 27.—It was announced here today that there are more men at work than on July 1, when the strike began. Numbers of strikers who have applied for jobs found that they were not needed and the road is weeding out a number of men employed who were not up to the standard.

On the entire system nearly 90 percent of the normal number of shopmen and mechanics are now at work.

President W. A. Winburn, of the Central of Georgia, in a statement today, pointed out good results from the return of shopmen to work. Particularly, he cited, that the return to normalcy in the shops of roads which have settled with strikers will tend to relieve presently the shortage of cars from which the country is suffering.

He said that the general business outlook in the territory covered by the Central lines is distinctly good in agriculture, manufacturing, lumber business and other departments of activity. Six striking foremen of the Seaboard shops returned to their respective places in the shops here today.

FAIR OFFICIALS EXPECT EXHIBITORS' RUSH SOON

Exhibitors will "descend" upon the Southeastern fair October 12-21 by auto, truck, wagon and train in a few days to get their exhibits ready for the big show.

Every exhibit of livestock, farm products, children's work, women's work and machinery must be in place the opening day of the fair, according to Secretary R. M. Striplin. Exhibit buildings have been cleaned out and decorated, grass has been cut, walks and drives have been made ready, and everything will be in spick-span shape when the gates open.

CHARTER CHANGE LOST IN ELECTION AT AMERICUS, GA.

Americus, Ga., September 27.—(Special.)—Americus voters today decisively defeated the proposed change in charter. Less than a hundred votes were cast and little interest was displayed in the result.

This was due to the fact that after its passage by the legislature the charter bill was declared to be defective. A referendum clause in the measure provided it must be adopted by a majority of voters participating in the election before the new charter would become effective.

After the discovery of the defect both advocates and opponents of the charter united in a determination to kill the measure at the polls. This was accomplished today, the vote being almost unanimously against adoption.

A FINER CAR

SIGNIFICANT of the immediate popularity of the new Cole Eight Ninety Ultra Series, the first month of its production established the high mark for sales for the past two years. The unprecedented increase in sales necessitated more than doubling the proposed production schedule for the coming season.

Behind the building of this new Cole Eight Ninety Ultra Series is an ideal that J. J. Cole, its builder, has fostered through twelve years of motor car construction—that of "A FINER CAR." The owners of this new series have been quick to sense the superior dependability that is evidenced by its performance. Unusually attractive in design, this car stands out pre-eminently as a product of exceptional motor car engineering. The ideal back of its building has brought forth distinction in design and superiority in performance. To drive the new Cole is to appreciate the realization of an ideal.

Suppose ten cents would buy a perfectly good lantern that would give you light on all your painting problems, would you buy it?

ALL right—send along your ten cents, and say you want the Happy Happening. It may seem like a queer name for a lantern, but it isn't when you learn that the lantern is in shape of a practical purpose book that is packed full of just the things you want to know about paint and painting.

It throws light on the things that have to do with when to paint, how to make paint last, and what paint has lastingness, and why.

It has to do with painting on the inside, as well as out.

It is, therefore, as interesting to a woman as to a man. In fact, it was written by a man and his wife.

Slip ten cents in an envelope, along with your name and address and these three words: "Send Happy Happening." Why it is called that, you will know after reading the first page.

DEMOCRATS OPEN MISSOURI ATTACK

Mexico, Mo., September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—The democratic campaign in Missouri was opened here today with addresses by Senators Joseph Taylor Robinson of Arkansas and A. O. Stanley of Kentucky, assailing the national and state republican administrations for "incompetency and inefficiency."

Declaring the people of the country were disappointed with the results of President Harding's and Governor Hyde's administrations, Senator Robinson, who was chairman of the Democratic national convention at San Francisco in 1920, asserted that President Harding "for absurd reasons" has failed to fulfill the pledge he made when a candidate to enact adjusted compensation legislation for ex-service men.

He said the congress, which just adjourned, performed the "lowest level of public service known to our political history," and attacked the Fordney-McCumber tariff as "a tribute to tariff profiteers rather than a safeguard to American industry." He declared the tariff would increase the cost of living while the the workers' earning power was being diminished.

Taxes in Missouri, which the people expected the republicans to reduce, "on the contrary have been increased," the Arkansas senator added, and the "police authority has been recklessly employed to harass peaceful, law-abiding citizens."

Stressing that freedom and liberty were being trampled upon and a bureaucratic government was being established in this country, Senator Stanley characterized Senator Reed as the "fearless defender of human rights" and urged a return to the constitution, which, he said, guaranteed to every person equal rights.

Declaring that the democratic platform since the time of Thomas Jefferson stood for the protection of the rights of the people as provided in the constitution, he asserted that 30,000 agents and inspectors are employed by the federal government, and that "every business man finds an inspector at his elbow, a federal sleuth at his heels, houses are searched, homes outraged and the public highways dappled in the blood of unoffending citizens by a multitude of agents and inspectors ignorant of and indifferent to the law of the land and the rights of the citizens."

He declared that congress has created 100 different committees, commissions, boards and bureaus within the past 10 years, which have expended $4,000,000,000 "in doing for the people what they could have done infinitely better for themselves." He asserted "the entire cost of operating the federal government from the inauguration of George Washington to the civil war did not approach this colossal sum."

JUDGE BRYANT SPEAKS AT MASONIC MEETING

DRASTIC EMBARGO BY EASTERN ROAD

New York, September 27.—The Lehigh Valley railroad today announced a drastic embargo, effective at midnight, against all freight, both east and west bound, except food for human beings and animals, live stock, perishable and necessary products.

Officials of the road said the embargo was necessary as a means of breaking up congestion of freight cars, directly resulting from the shop crafts strike, the resumption of coal mining, large crop consignments and heavy shipping of freight since the recent activity in industrial lines.

Acceptance of freight on normal terms is expected to be resumed by Sunday midnight, tentatively set as the date when the embargo will be lifted.

None of the other eastern railroads contemplated embargoes for the present, it was said at the various offices. The Lackawanna's embargo on westbound freight out of New York, established last Friday, would be continued for some little time, it was said, but without additional restrictions.

In railroad labor circles it was stated that 78 roads estimated to operate one-third of the nation's mileage had signed agreements with their striking shopmen on the basis of the Baltimore agreement.

FRELINGHUYSEN WINS NEW JERSEY PRIMARY

Newark, N. J., September 27.—United States Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen, a friend of President Harding and one of the administration leaders in congress, was renominated by the republicans of New Jersey yesterday in a sweeping victory of more than two to one over George L. Record, a Jersey City lawyer.

Returns this forenoon from 2,054 of the 2,464 districts in the state gave him 146,933 votes against 69,922 for Record, a lead of 77,011.

Senator Frelinghuysen took Hudson county with Jersey City, his opponent's home, by almost thre to one, upsetting predictions.

The senator waged his campaign on two main issues—prohibition and the tariff. He did not discuss the soldier bonus, against which he voted, and he rarely answered Record's charge that he was sympathetic with monopolies.

In the November elections, Senator Frelinghuysen will fight it out at the polls with Governor Edward I. Edwards, the democratic nominee for United States senator. As Governor Edwards is the champion of the "wets" New Jersey voters expect a warm contest on the prohibition issue.

Most of the republican congressmen who were opposed in yesterday's battle seemed today to have been victorious over non-organization candidates.

Neither democrats nor republicans had a contest for the gubernatorial nomination. The republicans nominated State Senator William N. Runyon for governor and the democrats nominated Judge George S. Silzer.

The Rev. Warren T. Coon, army chaplain during the war, won the republican nomination for congressman in the eighth district from Representative Herbert W. Taylor in a tight contest. With only a few districts missing, the clergyman had 8,759 votes to 8,505 for Taylor.

Representative Francis F. Patterson, Jr., was renominated by the republicans in the first district, Representative Randolph Perkins also was renominated. He defeated former Congressman John R. Ramsey, of Hackensack, for the republican nomination by about 4,000 votes.

POLICE CHALLENGED BY NEGRO DESPERADO

After sending a bullet crashing through the hip of Lloyd Thomas, colored, Wednesday night, on Decatur street, near police station, Charlie Earl, negro fugitive sought by the police on charges of attempted murder, shooting another, and attempted highway robbery, sent a challenge to the police at midnight, stating he would shoot any officer who attempted to arrest him.

A police car loaded with officers, riot guns, and other manslaughter equipment, was dispatched to bring the alleged bandit to headquarters. Up until an early hour Thursday he had not been located.

Thomas is at the Grady hospital. The bone in his hip is fractured. He said Earl shot him when he told him he was going to "turn him up" to the police.

The Best Better.

(From Everybody's Magazine.)

At a western post, a lieutentant, transferred from Texas, reported for duty. Upon his arrival, the commanding officer said:

"Mr. Bush, I have a letter from your former colonel. He tells me that you have one weakness, and that is for betting. You must cut that out in this regiment. I won't stand for it. Look at me; you couldn't hire me to make a wager now. What do you bet about, anyway?"

"I will bet on anything," said the youngster. "For example, colonel I'll bet you twenty-five dollars you have a wart on your left shoulder."

"What?" said the colonel. "I'll just take that bet." He pulled off his blouse and his top shirt and displayed a shoulder without a blemish. "There is no wart there," he said. "You lose; give me the money. I hope this will be a lesson for you."

Then he put on his shirt, buttoned up his blouse and dismissed the young officer. Whereupon he sat down and wrote a letter to the colonel in Texas.

"Just as you wrote me, this youngster wasn't in my office two minutes before he bet me twenty-five dollars that I had a wart on my left shoulder. Of course he lost. I hope it will be a lesson to him."

In a couple of weeks a reply came from San Antonio.

"The youngster wins. Before he left, he bet me one hundred dollars he would have your shirt off in five minutes after he met you."

Clarke Appeals To Bar to Back Supreme Court

Cleveland, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—Associate Justice John H. Clarke, of the United States supreme court, in his first public address since his resignation from the nation's highest tribunal, before members of the Cleveland Bar association here last night called on all members of the bar to join in his effort in defense of the national supreme court against what he termed "the present period of criticism."

Justice Clark, who announced in his letter of resignation that he intended to devote much of his leisure time to campaigning for the league of nations participated in by the United States, did not mention the league in his address.

In the course of his speech Justice Clark declared he had again taken up a fight "to simplify Ohio's governmental and election laws."

"Keystone of Political Fabric."

"It is not for me to eulogize the United States supreme court," Justice Clark said. "I believe it is more firmly imbedded in the affections of the people of the United States than ever and because there is criticism of it, I urge the people not to be discouraged or the lawyers to be afraid.

"History shows that beginning in 1790, the supreme court entered a fire of partisan criticism lasting for years; in which the leaders of the country for a generation took sides. Then the court emerged more entrenched than ever in the minds of the people.

"Notwithstanding the criticism from various parts of our country, coming from social and political sources, I believe the people of the United States realize it is a pillar of our national government and the keystone of our political fabric.

Most Complex System.

"Free government is more complicated than any other. Its form in our country, with our local, state and national divisions is the most complex system ever devised in the history of mankind and it will not work automatically nor by chance. It will work only by intelligent voters voting intelligent ballots.

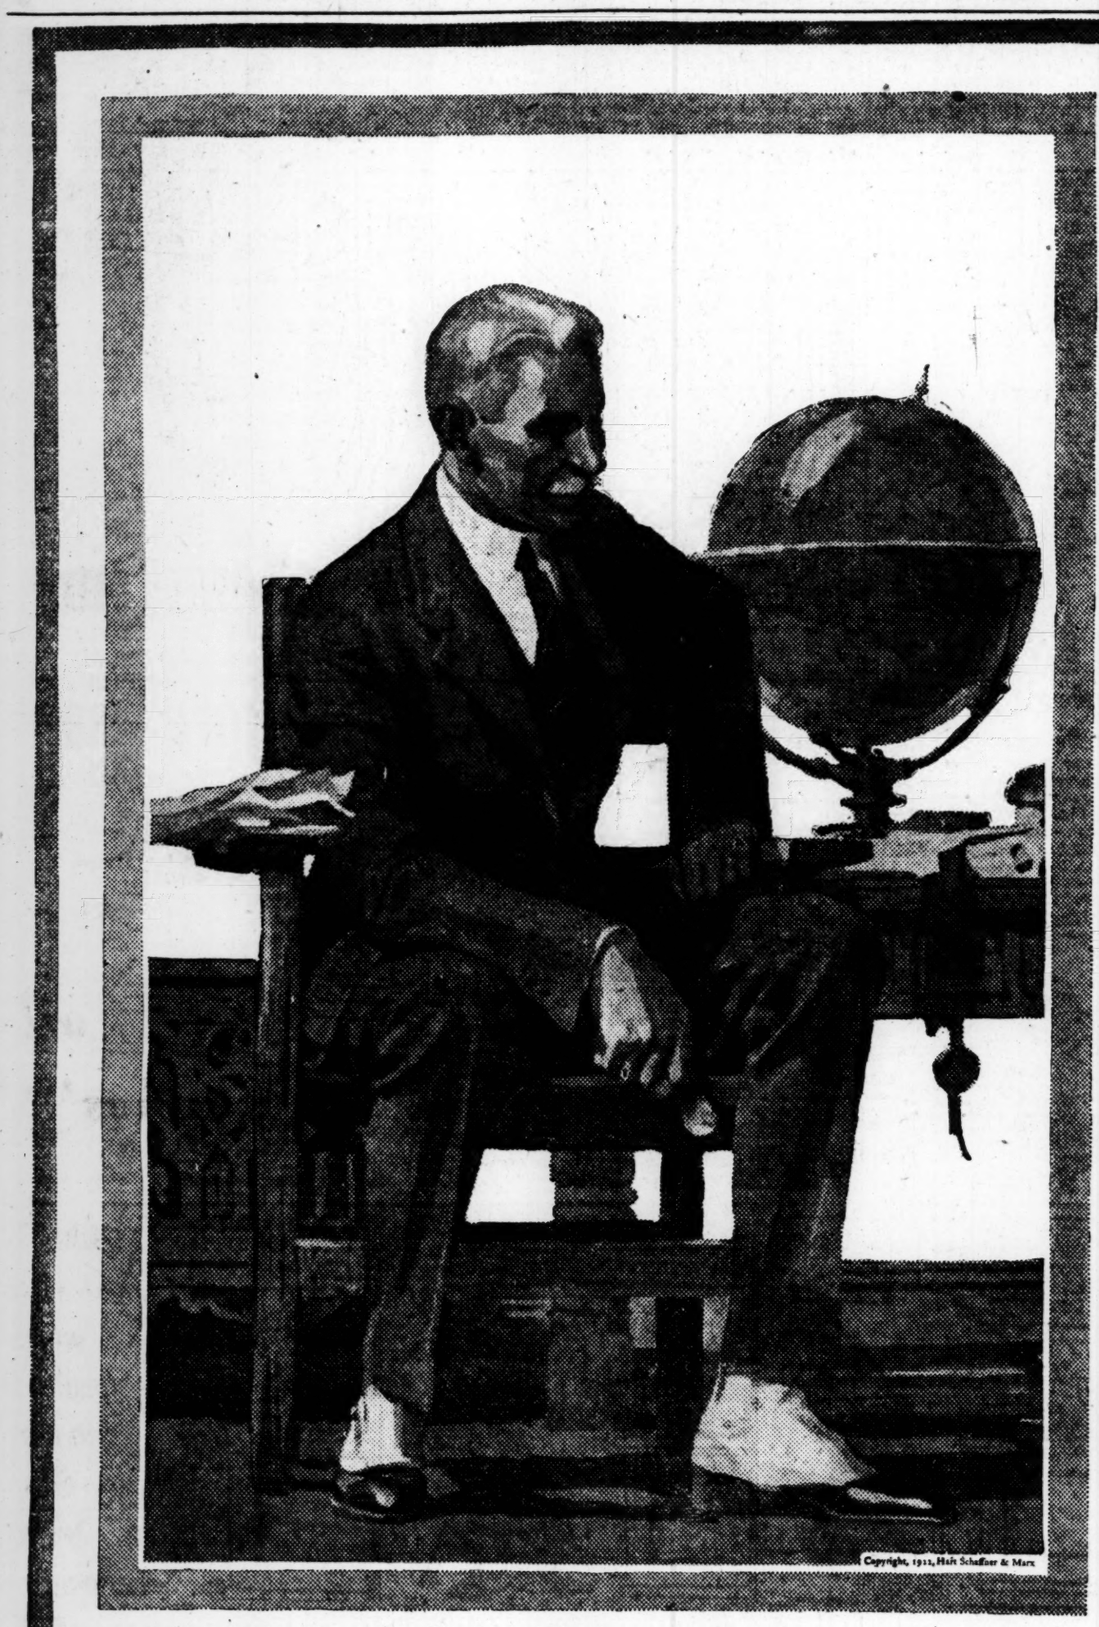

"The problem that calls to us is to see whether it is possible to change it. High time we heeded this call. General disrespect for law—a general feeling of unrest and discontent—the breaking up of our electorate into groups and blocs—every man seeking for himself alone, and no man thinking of the country—this confronts the bar of Ohio and the United States.

"There never was a time when the bar of Ohio and the nation offered as much to its profession, nor the accompanying responsibility so great. I believe the bar of our state and country is equal to it but I firmly believe that unless we act at once all will fall into confusion. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

The Great Prince Shan

BY E. PHILIPS OPPENHEIM

Next Week, "Joan of the Everglades"
By Millard C. Horton

The door of the box was once more opened. Naida entered, followed by Nigel. Both were obviously disturbed.

"What has happened?" she asked breathlessly.

Nigel had poured out a glass of wine and was holding it to Naida's lips.

"Something very terrible," he said quietly. "Prince Shan was murdered in his box there a few minutes ago."

Maggie looked across the great empty space. The still figure in the green mandarin coat had disappeared.

"Prince Shan was murdered in that box," she repeated, " a few minutes ago?"

"Yes."

Suddenly she began to laugh. It was a strange, hysterical ebullition of feeling, frankly horrifying. Naida gazed at her with distended eyes.

"Prince Shan has never been here!" Maggie explained brokenly. "He has never left his house in Curzon street! He is there now!"

Nigel shook his head.

"What is the matter with you, Maggie?" he demanded. "Every one has seen Prince Shan here. You spoke of him yourself. He was in the box exactly opposite."

She shook her head.

"That was one of his suite," she cried. "I know! I tell you I know!" she went on, her voice rising a little, "Prince Shan is safe in his house in Curzon street."

"How can you possibly know this, Maggie?" Naida intervened eagerly.

"Because I left him there half an hour ago," was the tremulous reply.

Nigel took Maggie home. Now that the excitement was over, the strain of the emotion she had experienced showed in the violet shadows under her eyes and in the droop of her shoulders.

Nigel came over and sat on the arm of her chair.

"Tell me what happened tonight, Maggie."

Maggie explained how La Belle Nita had received her and how Prince Shan had surprised her in his house.

"You must tell me the rest, please." She stirred uneasily in her chair.

"Remember," he persisted, "that in a way, Maggie, I am your guardian. You seemed to have walked into a trap. Did he threaten you, or what?"

"There was nothing definite," she answered, "and yet—he made me understand."

"Made you understand what?"

"His wishes," she replied, looking up coolly. "He offered me the papers."

"That damned Chinaman!"

There was a cold light in her eyes which Nigel had met with before and dreaded.

"You forget yourself, Nigel," she said. "Prince Shan is a great nobleman and not of the same race as the Chinese you know. He is an Aryan, one of the world's rulers!"

"The rest? Tell me the rest," he demanded.

"I am here," she reminded him.

"And the papers?"

"I came away without them."

He turned, and, walking to the window, threw it open.

"What are your feelings for this man, Maggie?" he asked.

For the first time he was struck with a certain pathos in her immobile face. She looked up at him, and there was a gleam alomost of fear in her eyes.

"I don't know, Nigel," she confessed.

* * * *

In his spacious reception room Prince Shan sat in his high-backed chair whilst Li Wen, his trusted secretary talked. He listened gravely and critically.

"I am sorry about the little one," he said finally. "Nita has been very useful. She has been as faithful, too, as is possible for a woman."

Li Wen bowed and waited. He knew better than to interrupt.

"It was through the information which Nita brought me," his master went on, "that I have been able to check the truth of Immelan's statement as to the French dispositions and the reapproachement with Italy. Nita has served me very well, indeed. What she has done in this matter, she has done in a moment of caprice."

"My lord, in the plans of the greatest, a woman may be used, but she must be discarded." Li Wen murmured. "But what of La Bell Nita? She awaits your pleasure."

"I shall hear what she has to say," Prince Shan decided.

The girl came slowly forward, pale and trembling, smouldering fires in her narrow eyes. She sank on to the floor by the side of the chair.

"What is my master's will?" she asked. There was nothing menacing in his expression. Nevertheless, she felt the chill of death.

"You have done me many good and faithful services, Nita," he said. "What evil spirit has put it into your brain that it would be a good thing to deceive me?"

"My lord knows," she answered simply. "I did it to bring evil upon this English woman he has preferred."

Prince Shan held out a crumpled sheet of paper. The girl began to shiver.

"You have been very anxious, indeed, Nita," he said, "to bring evil upon this woman. This is the message you sent to Immelan. Listen, these are your words:

"'The greatest of all will desert you, if the Englishwoman whom he loves is not speedily removed. Even tonight he may give papers into her hand, and your secret will be known.'"

The girl sat transfixed. She seemed to have lost the power of speech.

"The devil is sometimes a useful confederate," her companion continued equably. "You warned Immelan that it was in my mind to refuse his terms and to open my heart to the Englishwoman, and you seduced Sen Lu to carry your message. Yet your judgment was at fault. The hand of Immelan was stretched out against me, and me alone. But for my knowledge of these things, I might have sat in the place of Sen Lu, who rightly died in my stead. What have you to say?"

She rose to her feet. He watched the white hand which stole irresolutely towards the loose folds of her coat.

"You sent me here to breathe this cursed western atmosphere," she moaned, "to drink in their thoughts and see with their yes. Jealousy with us is a disease. Over there one creeps away like a hurt animal to die. I am glad that what he does meets with your approval," was the courteous reply. "He came to me from one of your royal palaces. I simply told him that I wished my guests to have the best."

rule the world with great thoughts as when our bodies touch. I shall teach her to know her soul, even as my own has been revealed to me."

He waved his hand and she stole away. At the door he stopped her.

"Do you go to life or death, Nita?" he asked.

edged, "mixes his vermouths wonderfully."

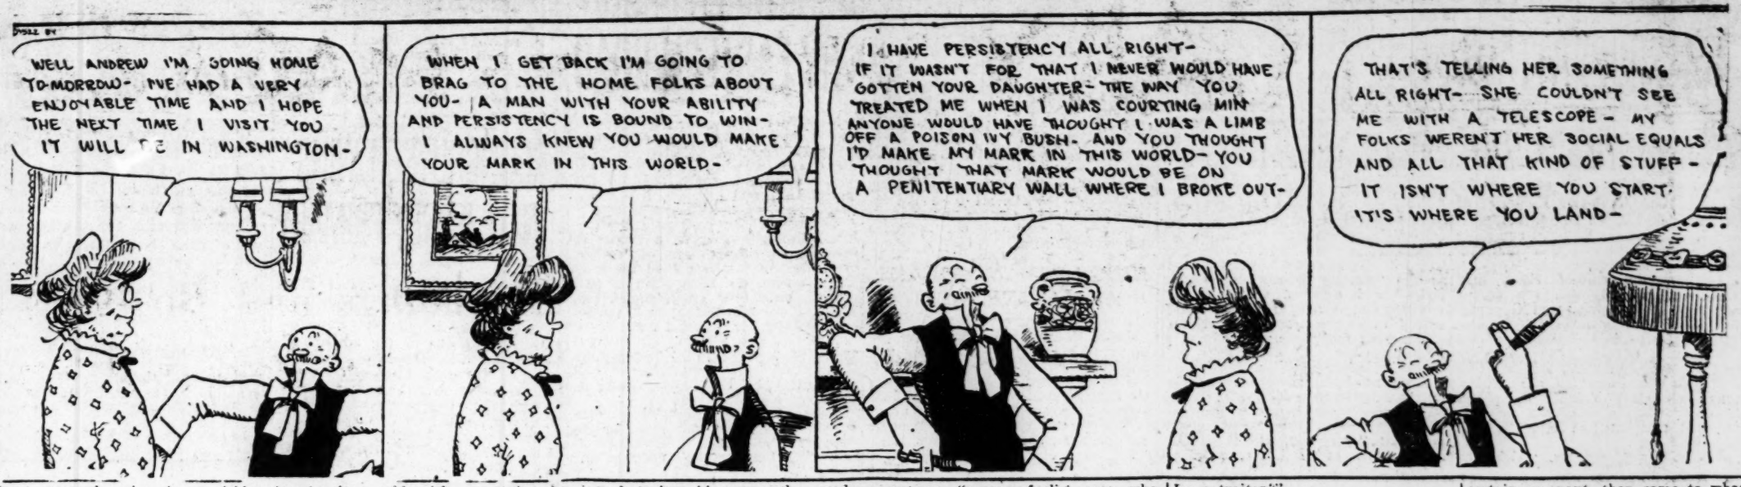

went on, "a very foolish man who, with one act of treachery wiped out the memory of a lifetime of devotion. In the end he told the truth, and now he has paid his debt."

"What do you mean?" Immalen demanded, in a voice which he attempted in vain to control. "How was Sen Lu a traitor?"

"Sen Lu," the Prince explained, "was in the pay of those who sought to know more of my business than I chose to tell. When they gathered from him, and, alas! from my sweet, but frail little friend, Nita, that the chances were against my signing a certain covenant, they came to what, even now, seems to me a strange decision. They decided that I must die. There I fail wholly to follow the workings of your mind, Immelan. How was my death likely to serve your purpose?"

because there is nothing else. Here it is different. The Frenchwoman, the Englishwoman, who loses her lover—she does not fold her hands. She strikes, she is a wronged creature! I, too, have felt that."

Her master sat for long in silence.

"The woman with the blue eyes has become the star of my life," he said at last. "If harm should come to her, not only you, but every one of your family and race, in whatsoever part of the world they may be, shall leave this life in agony!"

The girl stood and wondered.

"My lord thinks so much of a plaything?" she murmured.

Prince Shan frowned. His finely shaped, silky eyebrows almost met. She covered her eyes and drooped her head.

"We, of the East," he said, "although we are the mightier race, progress slowly, because the love of new things is not with us. Something of western ways I have learned, and the love of woman. It is not for a plaything I desire her whom we will not name. She shall sit by the side and rule. I shall wed her with my brain as well as with body. Our minds will move together. We shall feel the same shivering pleasure when we

She looked at him with a great sorrow.

"I am a worthless thing," she replied. "I go where my lord's words have sent me."

Li Wen brought messages.

"Highness," he announced, "there is a code dispatch here from Ki Chou. An American gained entrance to our secret city last week. Yesterday he left by airplane for India. He was overtaken and captured. It is feared, however, that he has agents over the frontier, for no papers were found upon him."

"His name?" the Prince asked.

"Gilbert Jesson, Highness."

"The man must die," the Prince said calmly. "That, without doubt, he expects. Yet the news is not serious. My heart has spoken for peace, Li Wen."

Immelan called to dine with the Prince. Shan led his companion into a recess, where the light failed to penetrate so completely as into the rest of the apartment. A soft-footed butler presented a silver tray, upon which reposed a glassful of amber liquid which Immelan sipped, appreciatively.

The Prince shook his head.

"I find that my manner of life keeps the brain clear," Prince Shan said slowly, "I can see the truth sometimes when it is not very apparent. I saw the truth last night, Immalen, when I sent Sen Lu to die."

Immelan's expression was indescribable. The hand which held his glass shook.

"Sen Lu was a traitor, his host

Uses Necessary to Conservation.

(National Lumber Manufacturers Association Information Bureau.)

It may seem paradoxical that the consumption of lumber in the United States is gradually decreasing and the lumbermen are seeking to extend their markets at a time when there is a great demand for reforestation and forest planting. There is however, really no paradox in this situation. Except as governmental bodies may do it for sentimental and general welfare reasons at the tax-payers' expense, "there will be private owners until there is a public forestry volume of demand and a satisfactory price, to induce owners of forest lands to treat their lands as capital from which to draw interest, rather than as a store of wealth to be drawn on until exhausted. It is only within recent years, with the increasing average price of lumber, that lumbermen have begun to consider forestry operations as even remotely practicable. There is, therfore, no incongruity in the stimulation of the lumber export trade, even though there is a probability that this country may suffer severely in the next ten or fifteen years for lack of cetain kinds of wood.

The Leading Lumber State.

(National Lumber Manufacturers Association Information Bureau.)

Washington is now, and with the exception of 1914 has been since 1905, the leading lumber producing state. Oregon stands next then come Louisiana, Mississippi, California, Arkansas, Alabama, Texas, North Carolina, Wisconsin and Florida, each of which produce more than a billion feet of lumber a year. It will be noticed that the premier lumbering states of former years, such as Minnesota, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New York, do not appear in the first 11 states at all.

Former Atlantan Makes Record as Mountain Climber

A former Atlantan, Mrs. Mellinger E. Henry, of Jersey City, who was Miss Florence Stokes, of Atlanta, figures interestingly in the records of mountain climbing during the vacation months in New England, which there is afforded in the Green mountain country, for instance, wild and adventuresome trips, almost as rugged as the great mountain sections west of the Mississippi.

Mrs. Henry was of a prominent family in Atlanta, a sister of Major Charles A. Stokes, United States army, now of the Philippine Islands, who was for a number of years prominently identified with the national guard troops in Georgia. Her husband is a prominent educator in New York, vice president of the Association of Teachers of English, and a noted book collector. She has taken up Mr. Henry's hobby of mountain climbing, in which he is famous as far as California, and has become an expert hiker.

Rutland, Vermont papers carry eventful stories of a recent trip they made into the heart of the Green mountains.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

I have before now in these columns lamented the disappearance of courtliness among married men; I have suggested that the woman is often to blame, because she wears her worst clothes before "merely her husband," or because she does not demand of him the services she required when they were engaged. There are other ways in which the wife sins. She allows her husband to get into the way of giving her no presents, except perhaps on Christmas day. She accepts it as natural that a busy man should fail to celebrate their wedding day; and she puts down to the fear of advancing years the fact that her birthday had better not be recognized at all. After a few years she complains that her husband takes no notice of her.

Now it is a delicate matter for a woman to demand gifts from her husband. If he is not rich he may take this as pressure, he may give grudgingly or even refuse. A wife who wants her husband to remember that she is alive must proceed with a sort of education. She must remind him from time to time that, as the French say: "Small gifts maintain friendship." If she begins early enough to lead him occasionally, very occasionally, towards the store from which she would have a gift, he will acquire the habit. He will tell himself that it is a long time since he gave Millicent a present. He will do it spontaneously. It does not at all matter to Millicent whether she has more pounds of candies or silk stockings. What matters is that her husband should think of her and that he should do so often.

Y. W. C. A. Aesthetic Dancing Classes.

In response to a popular demand, the Young Women's Christian association has added to this fall's gymnasium course that begins October 2, two classes in aesthetic dancing similar to those taught last year. Miss Norine Sears will again direct the advanced class and Miss Isabel Dew will again direct the beginners. The class for advanced pupils will meet on Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock. The beginners class will meet on the evenings of the same days from 6:30 to 7:30 o'clock. For detailed information, those interested in aesthetic dancing are requested to telephone the Y. W. C. A., Peachtree Arcade. The fees charged for the term beginning October 2 and closing April 28, are $7 for the half term which begins October 2 and closes January 20.

During the past year, Miss Sears and Miss Dew did an outstanding work with their dancing classes and this fall the enrollment of pupils includes not only many old members but many new ones.

Aesthetic dancing had not been previously planned as a part of the Y. W. C. A. athletic schedule this fall because the gymnasium will be more for recreation than in the past, but the time now allotted to the dancing has been so arranged as not to interfere with recreation.

Miss Campbell Honored at Tea.

Miss Louise Campbell, a lovely bride-elect of next week, was the honor guest Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris, Jr., entertained at tea at her home on Penn avenue.

The house was decorated with early fall flowers, arranged in silver baskets and vases. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the dining room. The centre-piece was a silver basket overflowing with varicolored blooms. Tall pink tapers in silver candlesticks completed the charming effect.

Mrs. Harris was gowned in a handsome afternoon frock of brown crepe-back satin, trimmed with beads.

DOES LAUNDRY WORK AND HOUSEWORK TOO

Surprised to Find Herself Feeling So Well

Taunton, Mass.—"I used to have pains in my back and legs so badly, with other troubles that women sometimes have, that my doctor ordered me to stay in bed a week in every month. It didn't do me much good, so one day after talking with a friend who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about the same troubles I had, I thought I would try it also. I find that I can work in the laundry all through the time and do my housework, too. Last month I was so surprised at myself to be up and around and feeling so good while before I used to feel completely lifeless. I have told some of the girls who work with me and have such troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I tell them how it has helped me. You can use my testimonial for the good of others."—Mrs. BLANCHE SILVIA, 59 Grant St., Taunton, Mass.

It's the same story—one friend telling another of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Phillips, president of the Atlanta chapter, to read the names of her committee at this meeting. The chairmen may refer to a new roster, now on file at the chapter house, it is announced.

Getting Too Fat? Try This---Reduce

People who don't grow too fat are the fortunate exception. But if you find the fat accumulating or already cumbersome, you will be wise to follow this suggestion, which is endorsed by thousands of people who know. Ask your druggist for Marmola Prescription Tablets and follow directions. One dollar is the price the world over. Get them from your own druggist or send price direct to Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. By doing this you will be safe from harmful drugs and be able to reduce steadily and easily, without starvation diet or tiresome exercise.—(adv.)

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.—(adv.)

ONE LITTLE BLEMISH WILL MAR YOUR BEAUTY

This delightful flesh-tinted cream forms an invisible coating which will clear the skin of tan, freckles, pimples, unsightly blotches, liver spots and similar blemishes.

Black and White Soap should be used in connection with Beauty Bleach. It is a pure soap and a delightful aid in keeping the skin clear, soft and youthful.

All good stores can supply you with Beauty Bleach at 50 cents a jar; Black and White Soap at 25 cents a cake.

The INVISIBLE HUSBAND

By Marguerite Hurter

Author of "Baby Eyes"

"Taking a Chance."

Driving down Riverside drive at 2 o'clock in the morning—in a big automobile with a strange young man! Deborah had never had an adventure like this before. But what harm could there be? He said he would drive her home. She had explained that she worked late, the buses weren't running, and he seemed to understand.

He was a respectable looking young man. In fact, Deb rather admired his looks. The car, she could not overlook, was elegant!

"Where to?" the young man asked breezily.

"Lexington avenue—near Sixty-third street," Deborah directed, but was amazed when he laughed.

"Not home so soon!"

"You don't understand," Deb protested. "I was going to take a taxi!"

"Oh, I understand alright," he said lazily. "You're a show girl, aren't you?"

"No, I'm a finisher."

"Finisher! What's that?"

"Just a needle girl. I work at Madame Marie's. I had to deliver some gowns up Riverside drive—for 'Souls Lost.'"

"What have dressmakers to do with lost souls, I wonder!" There was a queer twinkle in his eye and Deborah was sure that he was only teasing her. She continued to explain.

"We made the gowns for the movie in our shop. I had to deliver them to Phyliss Gay."

"Phyliss Gay? You mean you've come from Phyliss Gay's house?"

The young man turned about with a lurch, and the expression on his face frightened Deborah.

"Yes, sir! I delivered the dresses to her, so's she could have them for the rehearsal first thing in the morning. She's lovely, don't you think? She gave me some cake and lemonade and everything—she was having a party."

"A party, eh? Well, well, well!" he paused to laugh again in a discouraging way, but finished, "Might as well take you home then—you're not hungry. I intended to invite you for a bite of supper."

For a long time then they drove on in silence. Deborah finally began to observe, however, that they were entirely out of the neighborhood of her home—they were even headed in the opposite direction! A little breathlessly she asked:

"Aren't you driving me home?"

"Later I'll take you home. I want to talk to you now."

But for another mile he drove without uttering a word. . . .

Deborah began to fidget. She was afraid. Something in the way he leaned over and looked into her face under the arc-light of the corner made her heart beat anxiously.

"Please take me home right away," she pleaded. "If you knew how tired I feel and how hard I've been working all day—since 8 o'clock this morning—sewing and ripping on those horrid old dresses—"

He turned about with enthusiasm.

"By jove, that's the stuff! That's it! That's what I've been waiting for. It's a wonder you didn't show some spunk before. Didn't it ever occur to you that a little girl like you oughtn't to have to slave over the dresses of a vain, brainless woman like Phyliss Gay? A vampire who spends her money in riotous living! Champagne and parties! While poor people all over the world are crying for bread!"

"I never thought of that," Deborah said wistfully."

"Of course you didn't, or you wouldn't sit there praising her to the wonderful? I say she's despicable—skies! Wonderful? You say she's disgraceful! She can't even speak correct English. She's a menace to the profession!"

"She dosen't look it," Deb said ruefully.

"Look here, little girl," he interrupte.d how much do you earn a week?"

"Fourteen dollars."

"It's an outrage, that's what it is!"

"Why?"

"Because a woman like Phyliss Gay makes more in fifteen minutes than you do all week."

Deb began to add, multiply and divide the sum of fourteen, but the result could not possibly equal anybody's salary—it was too enormous. The statements of the young man began to irritate her to a point of retaliation.

"How do you know so much about Miss Gay's affairs?"

"I'm her leading man."

Deb nearly fell out of the car. Her leading man! He must be—yes, that's exactly who he was—Larry Demarest! Deb might have known it from his bushy hair—she might have known there could not be two such handsome males in the world. The just discovered hero was explaining—

"I was loitering around her place tonight just to get a line on the party. She'll never be the lot to start that new feature if she keeps up this pace."

"Why?"

Deb noticed that the young man appeared embarrassed. She found it difficult not to imagine that he might be in love with Phyliss Gay, and jealous of Bertie and the other suitors, despite his violent denuciations. Before she could probe deeper into this situation, however, the motor stopped before her rickety house on Lexington avenue.

"Good night. You're home now, little girl, but I had to drive you around a little to give you a scare. Don't you know you shouldn't ride in a strange automobile?"

"But there was a man on the corner, and—"

"I know. Did it occur to you that he looked like the fat man at the party? I saw him park his car around the block. That's Finkenberg. Watch out for him."

Deborah couldn't think of a thing to say, but she clasped his hand gratefully.

"It isn't the safest thing in the world, either, for a little girl like you to drink lemonade at a strange party. Understand?"

"I think I do, Mr. Demarest," breathed Deborah softly, and as he drove away, he blew back a kiss to the child, in regular movie fashion. That night Deb couldn't sleep a wink.

Fall Coats Of Distinction

Other Models in Pleasing Variety

There are loose, wrappy coats, and semi-fitting coats—cape-coats, blouse effects and belted coats—such delightful variety that every individual preference may be easily met.

Attractive Fabrics

The materials themselves are as delightfully warm as the soft Autumn colorings in many shades of brown, blues, and, of course, the blacks.

Fur Trimmings

Prices of Coats

The coat prices are as varied as the models.

There are coats of distinctive appearance that may be had at very modest prices—beginning at $29.50.

Other models at $35.00, $45.00, $49.50, $58.50, $68.50, $75.00, $89.50, $98.50 and up to $248.50.

Petrels Stronger Than Last Year; Likely to Give Tech a Real Battle

BY BILL MORROW.

With the opening of the 1922 football season in Atlanta only two days off, and with interest in the battle for the city championship mounting to a higher altitude than ever before, the rival elevens of Tech and Oglethorpe spent yesterday afternoon in hard practice. The "Stormy Petrels" of Oglethorpe went through a short scrimmage and spent the majority of the practice in running signals.

Coach Stein did not allow the regulars to mix in the scrimmage for any length of time, the first and second teams each scrimmaging for a short time with the third eleven. Blocking the forward pass was one of the main issues of the day, Coach Stein taking great pains to see that the backfield men were thoroughly trained in this important department of the game.

Followers of the "Stormy Petrels" were given an inkling into the plan of the coaches when Maurer was shifted to half with the combination of Morris, Varnedoe and Wallace. The combination mentioned above will be the likely one to start against the Yellow Jackets.

Varnadoe will in all probability start at quarter, with Morris at one half and either Maurer or Turner at the other, Wallace closing the list at full. Pre-game information points to a stronger offensive backfield than ever before, and with the line considerably stronger there seems no reason that the backfield should not gain much ground this year.

Varnedoe Will Do Punting.

Jack Varnedoe, quarterback, will do the punting for the Petrels in their first fray Saturday. Varnedoe has steadily improved in this department and his kicks average around fifty yards. In the little scrimmage yesterday afternoon, "Gee-Chee" got away several nice kicks, playing behind the scrub nine. Should Varnedoe be relieved, either Ed Davis or Jake Morris will do the punting. Both booted the ball last season. In the game last year against Mercer, Jake Morris averaged over fifty yards on his punts.

Secret practice has started at the university. Little is known of what the coaching staff has up its sleeve, as all the friends, supporters, students and faculty were run off the field and outposts were established so that no one could view the drill.

As to what style of play Coaches Stein and Browning are going to exhibit against the powerful Tech eleven, very little is known. In the recent meeting between these two Atlanta teams the Petrels were forced to play a defensive game. Only a few attempts were made to gain, the team being forced to kick immediately upon getting the ball.

The presence of plenty of desirable backfield men gives the university the opportunity of attempting to gain ground over or through the line. With a host of desirable substitutes ready to step in, Oglethorpe will present a far better conditioned and more experienced team than the determined but crippled eleven that faced the Jackets one year ago.

SIKI RECEIVES MANY OFFERS

Paris, September 27.—If Battling Siki could take up all the offers which have showered upon him since he knocked out Georges Carpentier he would have his million dollars before snow flies. As it is he must let his manager choose the best propositions, and the latter is reported to have accepted an offer of a bout in the United States. Siki prefers Jack Dempsey but will take Harry Wills, he says, if the champion doesn't want the match just yet.

Cables bring messages, to say nothing of fight promoters in the flesh adding every hour to the total of the money offered the black man for his next fights. The offers range from one of $2,000 made by an English promoter, to $150,000, received from the States.

Manager Hellers, who appears to be just as smart a business man as Francois Deschamps, the tricky strategist who pulled Carpentier along to great wealth, is inclined to prefer fights with Harry Greb, the American light-heavyweight champion, and Wills before closing in on Dempsey. Thus he would hope to pick up big purses for two huge preliminary engagements before risking everything in a battle with the champion.

The negro probably will fight the winner of the Frank Moran-Joe Beckett bout which is impending in England, in his next match. Thereafter he will go to the United States.

Carpentier, not yet recovered from the battering he received from the primitive slugger, is going to Biarritz in a few days to join his family, rest and consider the future.

The man who knows enough to keep his mouth shut, generally draws healthful breath as well as a good salary.

New York, September 27.—The champion Giants divided a doubleheader here this afternoon with the Phillies, the visitors taking the first, 5 to 3 in ten innings, and the home team the second, 3 to 2. Philadelphia won the first game through home runs hit by Henline and Wrightstone, off Johnson, a young right-hander from San Antonio. McGraw sent a team of recruits into the second game. After Ring baffled them for seven innings, the youngsters batted out three runs in the eighth.

Chicago Wins, 4-1.

Pittsburg, September 27.—Fred Fussel made his local debut by striking out four times today, but he pitched Chicago to a four to one victory over the Pirates. The recruit southpaw was somewhat wild but he showed a curve ball that stopped the Pirates with men on bases. The Cubs bunched their hits hits and fielded well. This game, transferred from Chicago, closed the home season.

ARMY STARS BEGIN WORK

BY M. D. GLEASON.

The Army and Marine football teams which will play at Ponce de Leon November 22 have begun active training for this big game, and have gone about it in the systematic way Uncle Sam always does big things.

As previously announced the Army eleven will train at Fort McPherson and the best football men in the army are quietly arriving at Fort McPherson. They will be coached by Lieutenant H. E. Beine, who was transferred to the fort last week to whip this team into shape in the shortest possible time.

Lieutenant Beine is a fast worker and after he had his men on the field four days he was so well pleased with them that he reported the good progress to Colonel R. H. Peck, the result being so satisfactory that they both visited the W. H. Perrin company and bought the best football outfit that money could buy.

All the officials and men at the fort are taking the keenest interest in this game and it is expected that every Atlanta man that ever shouldered a gun for Uncle Sam will be watching the outcome of this game.

SECRET DRILL FOR VIRGINIA

Charlottesville, Va., September 27. (Special.)—A varsity squad of 40 selected Virginia football men are being intensively drilled by Coaches Campbell and Abel who will select eleven of this two score to line up against George Washington university in the opening contest of the season Saturday.

In the backfield there are Foster, Cameron, McCoy, Deane, Kaminer, and Littel, who are being worked at quarter, and Oppleman, Maphsi, Arnold, Wilson, Taylor, Walp, Wenger, Gibson, Hubbard, Cox and Barrow, the most recent promotion from the scrubs who are being shifted about in the other positions behind the line.

Thesmar, Lewis, King and Doty are being tried in center, and Davis Campbell, Deitrick, Brown, Walker and Holland on the ends, while the guards and tackles have been filled in with Captain Hall, Ward, Blachford, Fenwick, Hennessy, Gill, Weaver, Otto, Rainey, Rivers, Winston, Ryan and Cutchin.

Players Recover.

After the rest up after the weekend the men who had sustained minor injuries during the scrimmage last week appeared on the field ready to play. During the half hour of light scrimmaging the varsity had everything its way and had little trouble carrying the ball over the scrub goal line seven times during the period. While some of the work was still ragged marked improvement was shown over the uneven playing of Friday and Saturday.

This afternoon the gates of the grounds were closed while the squad was put through signal and general practice. The second scrimmage of the week is scheduled for tomorrow.

Oscar Swineford, of Richmond, was elected cheer leader by the General Athletic association to take the place of B. M. Baker, Jr., of Norfolk, who as captain of track, will not be able to lead the songs and yells of the students this fall. Cheering practice will probably be held in the Lambeth field stadium some afternoon later in the week.

WAKE FOREST VS. CAROLINA

Wake Forest, N. C., September 27. — (Special.) — Coaches George Levene and Phil Utley are devoting the remainder of the practice days before the Carolina game to drilling the varsity squad in the technique of the gridiron sport and in the plays that will be used in the first important game of the season next Saturday in Goldsboro.

Last Saturday's exhibition with Atlantic Christian college in which Wake Forest won by a score of 34 to 0 served well to give the coaching staff a good line on their men under the fire of an opposing eleven and the weak places in the line-up were brought to light. Nearly all of the first string men were used against the opposing team but no combination was kept in the game long enough to test accurately the real strength of the Wake Forest eleven.

Professor Newmarker, who assisted in coaching the 1921 eleven, is again on hand daily and aiding Coaches Utley and Levene in getting the players in shape for the opening of the college season with the university. Assistant Coach Newmarker played in the line several years on Connecticut State's eleven some years ago.

With the return of Hansen to college the prospects for a strong backfield are imminent as was evidenced Saturday when gains by the backfield were exceedingly consistent for so limited a time of practice. Harry Holmes, who played on Wake Forest's team back in 1918 and was a member of the navy squad one season, was unable to get in Saturday's affair on account of an injured shoulder which is rapidly healing and he will be able to appear in the line-up next Saturday.

Dixie Grid Teams Start Saturday

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY

Tech-Petrels Hold Local Interest

Those are hardly simple assignments that face southern gridiron machines as they get up steam Saturday. The big boys, of course, are expected to win over their weaker brothers, but this reporter doubts seriously if the huge scores that usually mark these opening struggles will be recorded.

The Tech Yellow Jackets steer into Oglethorpe's stormy Petrels as their first foe, and if Coach Stein's gridders are as strong as we have been led to believe by that most optimistic of all college correspondents, Master William Morrow, the Jackets are going to sting and be stung in the approaching encounter.

Over in Athens the Georgia Bulldogs and the Mercer Baptists will be reeling off the second game of the season. Last week, you will recall, Georgia shocked the south by rolling up 82 points, or if not exactly that figure, one large enough to make Dixie's gridiron customers gasp. Newberry, the Athenians' opponents on that day, also tossed a bomb by inventing a couple of touchdowns against a defensive system that had come to be regarded as one of the best in the nation.

While Georgia was scoring a touchdown every minute or so, Mercer was being given considerable entertainment by the Piedmont mountaineers, who were finally trounced, however, 21 to 3. Coach Cody didn't put half his real power into that conflict.

The community grid experts are rather of the opinion that the big fellow sent his charges in with orders to hold back their most effective weapons, saving them, naturally, for the game with the Red and Black. This game will draw a number of local enthusiasts to Athens and it will more than justify expenses, too.

Tigers Meet Howard.

Auburn steers into the Howard eleven Saturday. Last season, if we recall correctly and admitting that there's a chance of mistake, Howard in some miraculous manner succeeded in scoring against the Tigers. They may not do so this time, but the wise ones are going to watch this game. Something might happen, although there's little possibility of Donahue's machine starting in reverse.

The University of Virginia finds a set-up in George Washington, even if the British didn't, and North Carolina should not be seriously concerned over the opposition Wake Forest will offer in their annual game at Chapel Hill.

Which brings the story down to Centre and Clemson. Some fine publicity handlers are in charge of Clemson athletics and interest has grown in this struggle until it is regarded as just about the best game in the south for that day. The Tigers are slated to lose, but you can depend on Clemson fighting to the last ditch. Reports are floating around that "Doc" Stewart has rigged up the most powerful combination the Tigegs have sent to the wire in many years. Captain Roberts and his followers might walk into a rude shock. Centre has been known to do that, you know.

The team that was trampled last week by the Colonels, Carson-Newman, plays the University of Tennessee and there should be little difference in the scores. Emory and Henry, trimmed by Tennessee, moves over to Washington and Lee for more drubbing.

Furman Opens, Too.

Furman, the South Carolina team, that has come into such prominence in the football world during the last few years, will take on Newberry and the boys will look at that game to get a line on the battle Furman and Georgia must stage later in the campaign.

Nothing hard is in store for Vanderbilt, except that Tennessee Normal, Vandy's opposition, is heavy, very heavy. If that weight is above the neck, Vanderbilt should give the high scorers something to shoot at, but if it's south of the collar line, McGugin's charges won't hand us anything to gape at Sunday morning. Dan has been calling for beef all the fall, but his squad is said to be mighty fast and furious.

We see nothing but bruises and added humiliation for the Marion cadets in their game against Alabama's Crimson Tide at Tuscaloosa Saturday. The Cadets about this time every year take a beating at the hands of Scott's men and some splendid reports on Alabama's strength have been sent out by the tolling correspondents.

SMITHIES TO PLAY TIGERS

Despite the fact that Bill Perkins, Tech High's great tackle, and their quarter, Captain Herbert Brooks, have both been injured to such an extent that they will probably be unable to play before the latter part of this season, the Junior Tornado has filled out her schedule with a game with the Auburn freshmen and invades that territory Saturday.

Tech High's outlook has been brighter than ever before, and the knockout blow handed them by heartless fate doesn't seem to make them the least bit discouraged. Of course, they realize that the young Tigers are a hard bunch of babies to buck, but they are confident, in spite of the handicap, they will be able a-plenty to do battle.

It's hard—but the Smithies are going to fight—they've got to. They knew before the loss of these two men who, by the way, formed most of the foundation of the team, they would have to scrap like never before. The hardest schedule in the history of the school is about to be tackled by the 1922 squad. And with the loss of Perkins and Brooks it looks as if they will have to double their efforts to ride the top in the end.

Quite a Battle.

The game Saturday will be a battle royal. The Tigers are just dying to bump up against Tech High, while the latter isn't at all despondent over the coming game. Both teams are ready for trouble, regardless of the misfortune of Tech High.

Bill Perkins is a loss, indeed, to the juniors Jackets. He was the man that they were depending on to help them over this hard schedule. But now Bill's got a broken nose that will keep him out of the scraps for a good little while. It's too bad that it should have happened just before the coming game—because if they ever needs dhim—they need him now. Bill is a coming star, and was looked on by all as a future all-prep man.

Herbert Brooks had his shoulder hurt. Brook's injury will probably eliminate him from all football during the early part of this season, as a broken shoulder is a stubborn and painful thing to heal. Herbert was another strong entry for Tech High, and they will miss him a lot in the coming battles of this year's schedule.

JOHNSON TO FIGHT STRIB

Thomasville, Ga., September 27.—(Special.)—That boxing bout to be pulled off here Friday afternoon under auspices of the local post of the American Legion is attracting much attention and the indications are that the crowd in attendance will be a record one.

The event will be held at the Westside baseball park, which is just outside of the city limits.

The city council had practically passed the ordinance allowing these bouts to be held in the city when the arrangements were made about holding it but it was thought best to hold it at the park and do away with any criticism of the city officials which might possibly be made.

Young Stribling, of Macon, who has become famous by his great success in many matches, will box with Jo Jo Johnson, of York, S. C. Another interesting match will be between Eddie Cook, of Savannah, and Young Pittman, of Augusta. Each of these will be for ten rounds. There will be two good preliminaries, making thirty rounds in all.

REMARKABLE SAVING ON DENTAL WORK

Came 60 Miles to the One-Price Dental Office in Atlanta and Saved $22 on a Bridge of 4 Front Teeth.

His teeth needed treatment. He heard of the One-Price Dental Office, 104½ Whitehall street, corner of Mitchell, Atlanta. Came to Atlanta from his home, sixty miles away. Had a bridge of four front teeth put in, and saved $22 on the job. This, in brief, was the experience of Mr. Guy Spearman, of Farrar, Ga. Furthermore, he is "perfectly satisfied" in every way. If a man can come all the way from Farrar to Atlanta and save money on a piece of dental work, how much more ought a resident of Atlanta to save by going to the One-Price Dental Office? The prices for work in this establishment never change and all work is guaranteed for ten years. You will certainly be unjust to yourself if you have any dental work done without first getting an estimate from the One-Price Dental Office. (adv.)

BUDD-WELLING BATTLE TONIGHT WILL SHOW REAL CLE RS

Miss Stirling Is Winner in Second Round, 7-6

Mrs. Alexander Is Unable To Cope With Local Girl; Mrs. Dave Gaut Defeated

Miss Stirling Meets Formidable Foe Today in Mrs. William Gavin, Who Was Returned Winner in Their Last Match.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., September 27.—Golf, interesting throughout and at times sensational, was played on the Greenbrier course today as aspirants for national golfing honors battled to retain places in the narrowing field of contestants in the women's national tournament. Close scores marked the contests, the second round of match play in nearly all instances.

There were few surprises in the day's results. No dark horses are left in the running to compete for entrance into the semi-finals. The eight players who survived the second round and make up the four pairs for tomorrow are all well-known present-day stars, many of them holders of golfing titles, home and foreign.

Interest attached today to the playing of Miss Glenna Collett, the Providence girl whose driving and steady iron and approach shots have featured the tournament. She disposed of her opponent, Miss E. A. Hardin, who fought gamely, but left the course defeated, 5 up and 3. Miss Collett played steadily and with the same confidence that marked her qualifying round.

Feitner Beats Hurd.

Mrs. Quentin Feitner, South Shore, defeated Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Boston, winner of many titles, 3 up and 2, by playing the same brand of golf she displayed yesterday when she eliminated Miss Marion Hollins, the present wearer of the women's golfing crown. Her driving was steady, and she used her clubs easily, but she dared not miss chances, for her opponent was experienced and was taking advantage of every opportunity.

The other battles were, for the most part, of the same tensity. The golfers again were favored with ideal weather, a day with a touch of autumn in the air, and there was a reward in the day's play for the galleries as well as the winners.

The scores follow:

Mrs. F. C. Letts, Jr., Onwentsia, defeated Mrs. Norman Torge, Nassua, 2 and 1.

Mrs. R. H. Barlow, Merion, defeated Mrs. Norman Rood, Wilmington, 1 up.

Mrs. Quentin Feitner, South Shore, defeated Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Westmoreland, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Arnold Jackson, Greenwich, defeated Mrs. G. M. Hicksher, New York, 2 and 1.

Mrs. William Gavin, England, defeated Miss F. Hadfield, Bluemond, 7 and 6.

Miss Edith Cummings, Onwentsia, vs. Mrs. R. H. Barlow, Marion Cricket club.

MRS. GAUT LOSES, MISS STIRLING WINS.

BY E. ELSWORTH GILES

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., September 27.—(Special.)—The most thrilling match of the morning from the gallery point of view was the setto between Mrs. David C. Gaut, of Memphis, the western champion, and Miss Edith Cummings, the fine match player from Onwentsia, Chicago. This match seesawed up and down all the way from the first hole, which Miss Cummings took in 5, until the pair faced the short home hole just as they were at the first tee, all square.

In reaching this even stage the players had alternately holed putts of 4 yards on holes 16 and 17. On the 16th Miss Cummings ran down a 12-footer, with Mrs. Gaut's ball 4 feet from the hole. The psychology of the holing in the circumstances caused Mrs. Gaut to miss her putt.

Miss Cummings played a fine mid-iron third to within 12 feet of the pin on the 475-yard 17th, while Mrs. Gaut, in the like, found her ball 5 yards short of the green, from where she pitched equi-distant from the hole with her opponent. Playing two more, Mrs. Gaut stroked the ball smoothly into the hole for a par 5.

Miss Cummings made a great try to hole her birdie for a win and only missed an inch.

The Deciding Hole.

Under the shade of two wide spreading oaks, the fair contestants, all even, teed for the decision. Miss Cummings, with the honor, played a grand mashie shot to within 10 feet of the 130-yard hole, and rested easily on her club, waiting to see if the western champion could match the shot. Mrs. Gaut's ball, flying high, was on a dead line for the pin, but was not strong enough, struck the face of the terraced green, and dropped back a couple of feet, still holding the terrace. From this position Mrs. Gaut pitched to within holing distance to the right of the pin.

Miss Cummings, with opportunity beckoning, stepped to her ball and smacked it squarely into the cup to the familiar sound of klup, klup, which is music to the ears of aspiring champions. It was a nervy putt, made at a critical moment, and it sealed the fate of Mrs. Gaut so far as 1922 is concerned.

Miss Stirling Wins Easily.

Alexa Stirling easily disposed of Mrs. Alexander and looks better each day as the matches near the semi-final. Alex Smith, the well-known golf mentor, said to the writer after the morning matches that, while he did not like to make many predictions, he thought the finalists Saturday would be Alexa Stirling and Glenna Collett.

Miss Stirling was playing with exceeding steadiness, if not with any special brilliancy, which, however, she was not called upon to uncover in the circumstances, because her opponent, Mrs. Alexander, did not offer championship resistance. The Atlanta girl reached the turn in 5 up, going out in 42, as follows:

Stirling:
Out	5	4	5	5—42
In	4	5	5

MRS. WILLIAMS WINS TOURNEY

Yesterday 20 members of the Atlanta Woman's Golf association turned out for the last tournament of the season before the woman's city championship.

The tournament yesterday was held at the Druid Hills club and was a ball sweepstakes event. The entrants were divided into four divisions according to handicaps and the number of holes to be played. The first divisions were 18 hole players and the fourth section was made up of the players who wished to play 9 holes.

In Class A Mrs. T. T. Williams shot a 97. This with her handicap of 10 gave her a net 87. Mrs. C. Bradley was second with 101-11, 90.

Class B winner was Mrs. J. E. Jagoe, who for the first time in her golfing career broke a hundred. She shot a 99 which with a handicap of 21 gave her a net 78. Mrs. Cyrus Strickler was second with 118-30, 88.

Mrs. Jess Daniel won the Class C prize with 140-50, 90. Mrs. Warren Granade was second with 133-40, 93.

Mrs. T. T. Williams with her 97 was low gross.

FEDS PLAY DOUGLASVILLE

BY M. D. GLEASON.

Reports reaching Atlanta are that everybody in Douglas and adjoining counties are making preparations to be in Douglasville Saturday.

This is the day that the Douglasville team plays the strong Federal prison ball team from Atlanta.

The federals are a very popular ball team in Georgia and they draw large crowds wherever they play.

While it is late in the season, yet it is safe to say that the greatest crowd that ever saw a ball game in Douglasville will be at this game.

Everybody wants to see these boys play, and they show their appreciation of the kindly interest taken in their welfare by playing big league ball every minute of the game.

THE SPORTSMAN

BY WALTER CAMP.

THE BIG COLLEGES will have to bear in mind that the public with a capital P is no longer ignorant of the football rules. A typical illustration of this fact was forced upon my attention in the Yale-Bates game. Johnny Mack, the Yale trainer, seeing that one of the Yale players was limping, ran out on to the field to look over the man and see if he was fit to continue in the game. As he did so a spectator back of me, certainly not a college man, said to his companion, "If that was in a big game, Yale would be penalized. She ought to be now but these big fellahs thinks they can get away with murder against the little fellahs."

SATURDAY'S GAMES showed that Yale has a wealth of fine material and that Penn State, despite the loss of stars, is going to develop a fast and resourceful team. Washington and Jefferson looked slower and more ponderous than last year. She evidently missed the driving power of Russell Stein in the line. Syracuse is loose and unknit as yet but she has potential power beyond doubt. Carnegie Tech evidently will put up a fine brand of scientific football this season.

Y. W. C. A. NET TOURNEY AT PIEDMONT SATURDAY

The first game of the Y. W. C. A. tennis tournament will be held on Piedmont park court Saturday, beginning at 2 o'clock. Miss Mary Elizabeth Hutchinson holds the championship cup for the Y. W. C. A. 1921 tournament and will defend her title in the coming games. The line-up follows:

Vera Milner vs. Margaret Porter.
Dot Morris vs. Ruth Hughes.
Dorothy Fischer vs. Mary Mann.
Gertrude Reiley vs. Peggy Launius.
Mary Glenn drew a bye.

Prince Dubs Shot.

St. Andrews, Scotland, September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Prince of Wales "dubbed" his tee shot in "playing himself in" as member of the Royal and Ancient Golf club today. In driving from the first tee before a crowd of golfers the prince scaffed his shot (cutting into the ground with the club before striking the ball) driving only fifty yards.

A great cheer went up when the prince, appropriately garbed for the occasion, carried out the ceremony which has existed since the club was founded in 1754.

Mobile Bears Win Dixie Baseball Championship, Beating Fort Worth, 2-1

"Pinch" Mulvey's Single Sends Across Winning Run in Ninth Inning—"Lefty" Fuhr Hurls Fine Brand in Final Game.

Fort Worth, Texas, September 27. (By the Associated Press.)—The Mobile Bears are baseball champions of the southland.

By defeating the Fort Worth Panthers, 2 to 1, in the seventh game of the Dixie series today, they brought the title to the Southern association for the first time since the Dixie series was established as an annual feature between the Texas and Southern circuits in 1920.

The Panthers won the first two games of the series, but the Bears displaying the same gameness and pertinacity which carried them to their first Southern pennant, retaliated by winning four subsequent games and clinching the title. One game ended in a tie.

The final game was the closest of the series and was in keeping with the evenly-matched play the teams exhibited throughout the series. Both teams played errorless ball. The Bears won by dint of stronger offensive strength and tighter pitching.

Fuhr Hurls Great Game.

Oscar "Lefty" Fuhr, who proved a stumbling block to the Panthers throughout the series, was entrusted with the task of pitching the final game and his performance was superb, excelling that of any other Mobile pitcher. Though figured to play only a minor part in the series, he jumped to the fore in the first game and from then on his work on the mound was of high-class. Today he delivered the Panthers to four scattered hits and staged a brilliant finish by striking out Paul Wachtel, pinch hitter and Harry Moore, hard hitting Panther catcher, for the final outs in the ninth inning.

Joe Pate, Panther's premier southpaw, who shutout the Bears in the first game, was sent back today in an effort to put Forth Worth on even terms with their opponents. He struck out ten men and issuing but two bases on balls. These two passes proved costly however, as both were followed by hits and accounted for Mobile's two runs. Fort Worth's run also was the result of a pass.

The story of the run-getting is quickly told. In Mobile's fourth, Cueto drew a pass. On the hit and run, Niehoof singled to left field and Mulvey hunted safely, filling the bases. R. Williams fanned but Mullen singled, scoring Cueto. Huhn hit into a double play. The Panthers tied it in the sixth. Coombs walked, Sears sacrificed and Calvo doubled, scoring Coombs. In the ninth Niehoff was passed with one down. He stole second and scored the winning run when Emmet Mulvey, who did very little hitting in the series, singled over short.

The play on Mulvey's bunt in the fourth inning resulted in a general dispute around first base and caused the ejection of Second Baseman Hoffmen of the Panthers, who maintained that Mulvey was out. Hoffman and Umpire Pfirman nearly came to blows, but other players prevented further trouble.

Mobile will now meet Tulsa, champions of the Western league, in a series for the class A baseball championship of the south and west. The series will open in Tulsa Friday, according to an agreement made at a meeting of officials of the Southern association and Western league here today.

BEST BALL 66 WINS EVENT

Belle Meade Country Club, Nashville, Tenn., September 27.—(By The Associated Press.)—A score of 66, turned in by George Thompson, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., paired with Horace Horner, of Nashville, carried off the honors in the amateur-professional event over the Belle Meade course today. The best ball card of the winners included five birdies, the rest of the holes being made in par figures.

Coming close upon the heels of the winners were Joe Kirkwood, of Australia, who had as his partner, Pollak Boyd, the crack amateur of Chattanooga, the pair having a best ball of 67. They were tied for second place with Leo Diegel, of New Orleans, and Norman Craig, of Nashville. Kirkwood rimmed the eighteenth cup for an eagle three that would have broken the knot.

George Duncan, the hefty walloper from England, negotiated the course in 69, by adding his best ball with that of Grantland Rice, of New York. Two other pairs had the same figures, George Livingstone, Belle Meade, with Mike Thomas, champion of Nashville, and Eddie Loos, Chicago, with Goodloe Lindsey, Nashville. Seven pairs finished with 70s, including Abe Mitchell, of England, and Frank Godchaux. Thompson's prize for winning the event is $125, and Craig wins a medal.

NEW HAVEN WINS SERIES

New Haven, Conn., September 27. New Haven, Eastern league champion for 1922, won the three-game series from Baltimore, International league pennant winner, by taking today's game, 6 to 5, scoring all its runs in the ninth inning with two out.

Going into their half of the inning the locals were behind, nothing to five, with few conceding them a chance, and with the crowd already beginning to pour out.

Shay, the first batter, singled to leftfield, but was forced at second by Bowman. Bayers singled to leftfield and both runners advanced as Gardella was thrown out at first. Cooney walked, filling the bases. Hargrave, with a two and two count, hit a home run over the leftfield fence, making the score 5 to 4. Woodward, who had replaced Stryker, singled to left. Martin doubled to right, Woodward, however being held at third. Malone then hit a hard fly to center which Styles misjudged and the blow went for a double, Woodward and Martin scoring.

Parnham, of Baltimore, up to the ninth inning, held New Haven to three hits. Stryker also pitched well, three of the visitors' runs being scored through errors.

Baltimore won the first game, 5 to 1 and New Haven took the second, 11 to 7.

GIANTS DELUGED FOR SERIES TICKETS

New York, September 27.—Deluged by applications for world's series tickets, the Giants today began accepting requests for the National league "home games" at the Polo grounds, including the opening contest.

The Yankees, although they have not yet definitely clinched the American league championship, also were being besieged by applications, but they were being held to await the actual winning of the pennant.

Prices for the series are the same as a year ago, ranging from $1.10 for bleacher seats to $6.60 for box reservations for single games. Tickets for the upper tier of the grandstand and for the bleachers, numbering 22,000, will be sold on the day of each game and only at the Polo grounds.

Investigate Race.

New York, September 27.—Stewards at the Aqueduct track today were investigating a reported attempt to disable a horse entered in the feature race of yesterday's card by stuffing a sponge in one of the animal's nostrils. The incident is said to be the fourth of a similar nature to occur this season on metropolitan tracks.

Welling in His First Workout Opens Eyes Of Local Devotees

Battling Budd is Accorded a Chance by Close Followers of the Mitt Game—He Fights Best When Crowded.

One of the greatest fight crowds in the history of the game in Atlanta is expected at the Auditorium tonight when Joe Welling and Battling Budd meet in the 10-round main event, on one of the best fight cards that has been arranged in Atlanta in many moons.

Not only is the crowd going to be large but it is going to include all the old time fight lovers of Atlanta who have fallen away from the habit of attending fights recently.

The card tonight is one that Atlanta would have patronized even in the old days when championship fights were usual, rather than unusual, here. Of course tonight's bout does not fall into the class of a championship affair, but it has class written all over it.

Joe Welling is a topnotcher in the lightweight ranks of the fight game of the entire world. He has met all the lightweights of any prominence and several of the welters of class, including the redoubtable Jack Britton. His battles in his own class, the lightweight and junior lightweight, included all names of prominence, from the great Benny Leonard right on down through the list.

His last battle with Leonard in Madison Square garden was one of the greatest ever seen in New York, according to the opinion of the Gotham sport writers. They stated in their reviews that Welling went right after the champion the same as if he has been a sparring pardner, and that he never slowed up until nature left him flat.

He counts among his prominent victories, two over Ritchie Mitchell, over Johnny Dundee and over several others of this same class.

Welling Shows Class.

Yesterday afternoon, in his first workout before Atlanta fans at the Marietta street gymnasium, he opened the eyes of the large crowd of fight fans who attended this event.

He showed himself to be as fast as a streak. His footwork was marvelous. He hit from any angle and with great power. He seems to have a knockout kick in either mit, and he did not hesitate to show his wares to the assembled populace.

The way he lambasted the dummy was something that it has not been given the local fans to see often. His work at the punching bag made even the old timers pick up their ears and wonder why Welling was trying to knock out the side of the building.

Still for all of Welling's class, Batling Budd, the local fighter, has a chance even with the master that Welling is. Of course you will say that anything may happen in the ring. This is correct. Anything may happen and it usually does.

Budd is the type of fighter that fights the best when the opposition is the strongest. The more class that there is to Budd's opponent the better Budd can go. Witness his battle against Mel Coogan here a few weeks ago. Budd had Coogan looking like a novice, and still no one who really knows the fight game thought that Budd had a chance with the master scrapper.

Many of them feel that Budd is out of his class with Welling. He may be, but even the men who are not adverse to taking a little bet are not laying any odds on Welling. They give you your pick of the fighters and lay even money. This is rather unusual, but it is the case. This is one thing that shows that it is a good match.

Budd is below weight right now and while Welling's exact weight is a mystery, still if he weighs over 136 pounds he will fool a lot of men who follow the game closely. It is a cinch that he will not weigh more than 136, and he will probably weigh less, when he climbs through the ropes tonight.

Budd's System.

Any fighter that will carry the fighting to Battling Budd is in for a full evening's entertainment of a more or less pleasant nature, depending entirely on what a man considers entertainment. Any man that crowds Budd is apt to get hurt. Budd meets a man coming in with more punches that sting, than any fighter who has appeared here for a long time. And tonight he will have the opportunity of fighting the type of fight that he excells in, for Welling is just the fair haired lad that is going to crowd Budd harder than he has been crowded for a long time.

Three other good matches complete the bill, and in spite of its general attractiveness there has been no advance in prices of admission. Ladies will be admitted free and boys in knee trousers will be admitted a half price.

The Capital City club has reserved an entire section, and the advance sale on tickets has been larger than for any battle here since Benny Leonard appeared here.

It is advisable for those who object to waiting in line at the Auditorium tonight for tickets, to do their shopping early. There are still many choice tickets left, but to wait until the box office opens tonight will be taking a chance on disappointment if you want your seats near the ring.

San Francisco, September 27.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, defeated Renato Gardini, Italian champion, two out of three falls here last night. Gardini won the first fall in 29 minutes and 30 seconds. In the second fall Gardini's shoulders were placed on the mat in one hour 21 minutes and 15 seconds. Lewis won the third fall in 4 minutes and 30 seconds with a headlock.

SPORTS through Edgren EYES

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Mark Twain, Bill Nye or Ring Lardner never wrote a funnier line.

Presumably Villa "must return" to defend his American title in the state of New York. Perhaps Villa will be suspended by the commission if he has the nerve to fight in any other state.

If Villa prefers to do his fighting, six months from now, in the Philippines, he may find himself in the predicament of Harry Greb, light-heavyweight champion and one of the best and squarest fighters in the game.

Harry Greb was challenged by someone representing Dave Rosenberg and a forfeit posted. Greb, probably having in mind the things the public would say about such a joke match, didn't take Rosenberg on.

The commission suspended Greb and, after a long time, the suspension is still in effect.

Greb, as sportsmanlike a fighter as we ever had who always delivers the goods he's paid for by the promoter and the public, can't fight in New York.

Incidentally it is claimed that any boxer who meets Greb in any other state will be barred from boxing in New York. This practical blacklisting of Greb has put him out of his profession for the time being.

VILLA'S SPEED MAY BEAT WILDE.

Villa may fight Jimmy Wilde of England, world's champion in the flyweight class. Wilde cables his willingness to make the match if there's enough in it. Wilde is too old and too long in the ring to be anywhere near his championship fighting form, and on that account Villa will have a first-class chance to whip him if they ever meet. Villa hasn't half of Wilde's skill, but he makes up for that with astonishing speed.

Buff couldn't block or avoid one of Villa's punches in three. And if Wilde can't produce a better average he'll get the same kind of a beating that was handed to Buff.

Wilde never had any trouble beating men of his own weight, and as a rule had to meet much heavier fighters to get matches. Villa, at 110 pounds, is in Wilde's weight class, and in height and reach the Englishman has an advantage.

Petrels Outweigh Yellow Jackets; Tech in Great Shape for Contest

Tech's Lack of Weight Will Be Made Up by Speed—Many Hard Games Ahead.

When Tech trots out on the field Saturday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock, Oglethorpe will in one respect be superior. The heaviest team that Tech can start will be several pounds lighter per man than the Oglethorpe team which will face it. A rather singular state of affairs, but true nevertheless. Few would think that Oglethorpe, in swaddling clothes in comparison with the remainder of her opponents, could put out such a formidable looking machine right at the very first.

Pick a team at random from among the Tech possibilities. You will find it far lighter than last year's. In fact, the Tech team this season will be the lightest since 1912. Start off with Frye at center. Here is 160 pounds. Davis and McIntyre together would weigh about as much as Tiny Roberts, or 352 pounds. Davis pulls about 182, and little Mac is good for the other 170. Suppose Al Staton and Johnson are used at tackles. Al weight 182, and Charley 196. Most of the weight on the team is concentrated in the tackles. Mitchell and Nabell are a pair of ends that fall far short of last season's weight. Mitch has about 158 and Nabell 155. Here is a line that will average from end to end about 172 pounds.

The backfield weight has been figured up before. McDonough, 163; Hunt, 160; Barron, 172, and Brewster 150. An average in the backfield of 161. The whole team could not possibly average over 168. Rather light for a team that has to play the Navy, Notre Dame, Georgetown, N. C. State, and a host of others. But all the more glory—should they come out on top.

Petrels Have the Weight.

The Oglethorpe team, though there has been nothing wild in the press about them, will easily average over 168 pounds. A few favored sons have seen them in their daily workouts, and marvel at their speed and wetaway. They also open eyes of wonder at the massiveness of the front presented. Oglethorpe-Tech is the opening game and all like that. But that will not keep it from being one of the very hardest games Atlanta people will have the opportunity of seeing. Coach Stein has been steadily working his men into shape. People who have seen them, they work and play like a real machine. Smoother than you could imagine, harder than you thought possible. He has driven his men at a terrific pace.

Coach Alex is not given to expressing himself rashly. When he makes a positive statement, he means it. He said something the other day which put every man on the squad to thinking, and woke not a few up to the job ahead of the team this season. His statement would run like this: "There are only three games on the schedule in which Tech stands an even chance or better to win." He was of course, alluding to Oglethorpe, Davidson and Clemson. In all the rest, he believes that Tech stands an even chance or better to lose.

Alabama a Real Team.

With Alabama returning practically all of last year's team, and with such a wealth of good material on hand that the coaches have a hard job taking care of the regulars, it would seem in a mild sort of way that they have something. People thought last season, because Penn State lost practically the whole of her team she would be weak. She showed Tech the fallicy of such belief. The Navy, always strong, has lost very few men. Due to the fact that they train practically the whole season, and play together at all times, no one would be bold enough to say that they were weak. In the same manner it is possible to go down the whole line of opponents and find not a weak sister in the lot.

Tech realizes the task ahead and has set their eyes on the goal. They have put football first, and are saving with a vigor and determination that is gratifying.

In the scrimmages Tuesday and Wednesday, more real fight and effort has been shown than in all the previous scraps put together. In many respects the play has been ragged. But the effort has been plainly in evidence at all times. Yesterday the interference improved much over anything previous. The varsity scored three touchdowns from the center of the field on nothing but superb cutting down and blocking. Tech will be ready for Oglethorpe Saturday.

Betting Barred.

Chicago, September 27.—The Illinois Jockey club has barred betting from the Hawthorne meeting starting Saturday, and is on record in a letter to members that no test case will be made. Several additional stables shipped in horses yesterday, and it was announced full programs already were assured.

LISTENING IN

Too rapid charging and discharging of storage batteries will seriously injure the lead plates. The faster the discharge the lower the efficiency of the battery. A 90 ampere hour battery designed for a discharge rate of 8 amperes will last for about 11 hours. But if by any chance the discharge rate is increased to 15 amperes the battery with the same full charge instead of releasing the full 90 ampere hours will be useless after four or five hours.

When the battery is fully charged the hydrometer reading should be approximately 1280. Batteries will suffer if the specific gravity of the electrolyte is permitted to decrease beyond 1160.

Once upon a time maps of the United States on which the principal broadcasting stations were represented by tacks or pins were a handy accessory. But now that the number of stations has increased so greatly a map is unnecessary. The amateur can be pretty sure that there is some sort of a broadcasting station within range of a one-tube receiving set.

The A B C's of International Morse Code

BY A. W. SHROPSHIRE

THE LETTER "V."

The letter "V" will be the single letter for today's lesson. Following our usual practice, it will be sent for five minutes, followed by the usual review of the letters already learned.

Remember, each time the letter is sent, write it down and concentrate your mind on the fact that that sound is the symbol for the letter "V." Do not allow your mind to wander off to other subjects while the letter is being sent. Once in a while the writer purposely makes a mistake in sending the letters. See if you can catch these mistakes. If you allow your mind to wander and automatically write the letter down each time anything is sent, you are not receiving the benefit of the practice.

The letters are now being sent faster with approximately the same amount of spacing between them as heretofore. This increases the speed of the practice on the whole but should not make the letters more difficult to recognize.

The letter "V" will be sent at 6:45 and 9:45, followed by the usual review at 6:50 and 9:50. Write them down.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

BY EDWARD N. DAVIS

LESSON NO. 159.
Points to Remember.

Remember that:

Specific gravity readings do not indicate the exact state of charge unless the value of the specific gravity is known at the time when the battery was last fully charged. Battery makers recommend a drop of not more than 80 points from the reading at full charge before the battery should be placed on charge.

In cold weather, freezing of the battery may be avoided by being careful to keep the battery fully charged and always adding whatever water is necessary before placing on charge.

Acid should never be added to the solution in a storage battery to replace loss by evaporation. Only in case some of the solution has been lost by actual spilling should additional electrolyte with the proper proportion of acid be added.

Vacuum tubes should have the filament operated at constant potential rather than constant current throughout their period of usefulness. Operation of the filament at constant current tends to further curtail the life of the filament.

The object of charging a storage battery is to drive the acid from the plates back into the solution and the charge is not complete until this condition obtains.

The windings of the amplifying transformers may be tested for open circuits by means of a telephone and a single dry cell, the absence of a click or a very faint click on breaking the circuit indicates that the winding is open.

Much of the howling and squealing in the receivers is often caused by the unskilled operator of the set turning the knob, which controls regeneration, so far that the detector tube starts to oscillate and oscillations are produced which combine with the incoming signal with the result that unpleasant sounds are created.

The component parts of a receiving set should not be crowded into too small a space, since interaction between coils and transformers will result in a loss of signal strength. If compactness is essential as in the case of portable sets, transformers should be placed at right angles to each other and windings of coils not inductively connected should be so located as to have minimum effect on each other.

Filament of vacuum tubes will last longer if operated in such a position that the filament will not sag when heated, but is always suspended in a vertical position. This factor should be taken into consideration when building receiving sets, so that proper provisions may be made for arranging the tube sockets in this manner.

Interference from high power spark transmitters situated in the vicinity of the receiving station may be eliminated by the use of an absorption circuit or radio frequency trap located in the ground lead of the receiving system.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS!

Radio Editor:—Will you please advise me through your answer column if honeycomb coils would increase the range of my set and how to hook them up: I have a two steep.

A. N.

Honeycomb coils will increase the wave...th of your set but they will not increase your range. If you have a two-circuit set you should connect one coil in the primary circuit and another one of equal value in the secondary circuit. The size of the coils depends on the wavelength that you desire to get. If it is 1,500 meters, and you have an average short wave set, you should use coils about number DL-200.

Radio Editor:—What is the amperage required to operate three Western Electric VT-1 tubes in parallel? Will two rheostats withstand this load without overheating? I mean to connect one rheostat to the two amplifier tubes, and one on the detector tube.

The amperage required is about 3.3 amperes. If you use good rheostats they will withstand the current without overheating.

Mrs. LeRoy Rogers, Pupil of Miss Hecht, Will Sing Group of Three Selections.

There will be an innovation tonight in the program from Station WGM between 6 and 6:35 o'clock by Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra. There will be a soprano soloist, Mrs. LeRoy Rogers, a pupil of Miss Margaret Hecht, featured on the program.

Mrs. Rogers is a soprano with a beautiful voice which is frequently heard in Atlanta. Mrs. Rogers, as a pupil of Miss Hecht, has developed unusually and her presentation tonight under Miss Hecht's direction on the program by the Aces is an event in the programs from Station WGM.

Mrs. Rogers will sing a group of three songs. The first of these will be "God Touched the Rose," by Mary Helen Brown. Her second song will be "Flower of My Heart," by Kennedy Russell, while her third selection will be "I'm a-Longin' for You," by Jane Hathaway.

All of the piano accompaniments for Mrs. Rogers will be played by B. H. Warner, director of the Aces.

Four Ace Numbers.

On the program with Mrs. Rogers will be four numbers by the Aces. Two of them are especially good They are "Song of India," in which the Aces recently made a big hit, and "Swanee River Moon," one of the prettiest waltzes the Aces play.

The other two selections by the Aces on tonight's 6 o'clock program from Station WGM will be "Low Down Blues," and "Send Back My Honeyman." The "Low Down Blues," which was heard several evenings ago for the fist time by radio is a development of the Aces. Its introduction was a tremendous success and showed the ability of the Aces in arrangements.

In their program last night the Aces again played "Low Down Blues" t the request of listeners.

The impromptu program last night by the Aces equalled the success of Monday night when the Aces offered their first impromptu program from Station WGM. Last night solos were featured.

Warner Sings Solo.

Foremost among the numbers last night was "Forgiveness I Crave," a tenor solo by Mr. Warner, who studies voice with Miss Hecht. Mr. Warner made an excellent impression in this solo and listeners called for more solos of the director of the Aces.

The other solo was "Until You Said Goodbye," a saxophone number by J. E. Pritchett, Jr., of the Aces. In this he also made a big hit.

The other two selections played last night by the Aces were "Lovable Eyes" and "Hot Lips," with trumpet parts by William Wilkinson, who is taking Tom Brannon's place this week while the latter is undergoing a minor operation at his home in Eufaula, Ala.

Chicago, September 27.—With trading quiet but supply of stocks not larger than buyers' requirements, the butter market continued steady to firm today. Ninety-two score was in light supply and most dealers were able to obtain a quarter cent more. The medium and underscores were a little hard to move but dealers usually managed to keep floors clean. The car market also was quiet, but 90 score car market was fairly firm. The light demand for 88-89 score cars threw the market on these slightly in the buyer's favor. Quietness on fresh market was caused largely by the freer use of storage goods. A few large sales of storage 92 score was reported at 38½ to 39 cents and cars of 90 at 36 and 36½ cents.

Weather Conditions.

New Orleans, La., September 27.—Temperatures are generally about normal or slightly above, with the lowest ranging from 50 to 66 degrees in the northern portion of the cotton region. Fair weather prevails, except that light to heavy rains were reported at a few stations in central Alabama. —Cline.

Summary of Weather and Crop Conditions in the Cotton Belt for the Week Ending September 27, 1922.

Washington, D. C., September 27.—Very little change took place in the condition of cotton, although there was steady deterioration in the northeastern portion of the belt because of persistent drought and weevil damage. Little or no rain, abundant sunshine and moderate temperatures were exceptionally favorable for picking and ginning, which made unusually rapid progress generally. Picking is about three-fourths completed in southern Texas and nearly half done in the northern part, and is much further advanced than usual in Oklahoma. Bolls are nearly all open in Arkansas and Louisiana. Harvest is well advanced in the Gulf states, with bolls nearly all open to the northern limits of Georgia, and mostly open in southern North Carolina.—Marvin.

Synopsis of Weather and Crop in Georgia for the Week Ending Tuesday, September 26, 1922.

Atlanta, Ga., September 27.—The past week was very dry, moderately cool with abundant sunshine and generally favorable for farm work, particularly the gathering of crops, but the weather has been too dry for the further progress of vegetation, except in some sections where there were a few showers, mostly in the southrn division. Cotton is nearly all open to the northern limit of the state; picking and ginning are far advanced and will be finished unusually early. Boll weevil is still reported active. The condition of cotton remains very poor, without any prospect for further improvement on account of the drought. Harvesting, digging sweet potatoes and peanuts, making sorghum syrup, and saving hay progressed actively during the week, but fall plowing could not be done, as the ground is too hard to plow. Cane made fair growth in the southern division, also fall white potatoes, which elsewhere are poor, needing rain badly. Late upland corn is poor, with fodder rapidly drying up, but bottom land corn is somewhat better. In most sections, especially over the northern portion of the state, pastures, gardens and truck are dying up. A moderate general rain would be beneficial.

New York, September 27.—Bullish private crop reports failed to stimulate buying in the cotton market today and prices broke sharply owing to reports of continued rapid marketing in the south and scattering liquidation. December contracts sold off to 20.66, the lowest prices touched since the advance to 23.05 for that figures and a net decline of 39 points, the lowest of the day with the tone heavy 30 to 39 points net lower.

The market opened unchanged to a 5 points lower. There was a little buying early on the relatively steady Liverpool cables and low private crop figures, but the demand was supplied and the market turned easier under continued southern hedge selling and scattering liquidation.

These offerings were comparatively light about noon, the demand failed to broaden on the slight rallies and the market was under heavy pressure late in the afternoon. October broke to 20.32 and January to 20.50, making net losses of 34 to 41 points and new low ground for the movement. A good deal of southern selling was reported here while local brokers said that trade demand seemed a little less active and attributed part of the selling to continued good weather for picking and marketing in the south. The weakness was generally ascribed to the increasing weight of the new crop movement and fear of a restricted export demand. Five private end month crop reports published today gave condition figures ranging from 49.8 to 51.9 and crop indications from 9,719,000 to 10,452,000 bales. Port receipts today 42,429. United States port stocks 658,712. Exports today 34,288, making 531,817 so far this season.

NEW YORK SPOTS

HEDGE SALES DECLINE NEW ORLEANS COTTON

New Orleans, La., September 27.—Hedge selling in large volume, much liquidation from the long side and more or less new selling for short account weighed against the price of cotton today from the opening. The market had but little strength at any time and, with almost no recoveries of consequence, it was one gradual sag with the greatest easiness in the late trading, the market closing at the lowest of the day, at net losses of 30 to 42 points. October closed at 19.93.

In the early session much of the selling could be traced to rumors over private wires that British and Turkish forces had clashed; this brought out a great deal of liquidation from tired longs but early declines amounted to only about 15 points. During the middle part of the session small recoveries resulted because of the highly unfavorable tone of the weekly crop reports from the government and because of several unfavorable private bureau reports on the crop condition, figures in these reports ranging from 49.8 per cent of normal up to 51.9 and indicated crop figures from 9,719,000 up to 10,452,000 bales.

Hedge selling increased after midsession and prices gradually gave ground under it and it was generally commented upon that liquidation of long contracts also increased after the noon hour. Additional pressure developed after reports were received by brokers here from some interior spot markets claiming that the spot basis was easier.

Stock Letter.

Under pressure of what appeared real liquidation the market sold off steadily and this tendency increased as a number of market leaders broke through to new low ground.

United States Steel made a new low on the move, as did many others in this group. Republic had an especially sharp break on reports that merger plans were to be modified in favor of Midvale.

Further impetus to selling was furnished by the passing of the Pittsburg Coal dividend which came as a complete surprise. While this company naturally suffered from the strike, it was supposed to be doing an active business at high prices and to have plenty of cash in hand.

There are no clear indications that the reaction has been definitely halted and we would accordingly withhold purchases until a more attractive level of prices is reached.

Cotton Letters.

New York, September 27.—(Special.)—Increased pressure on the movement of the crop from the south together with the liquidation of some large long lines brought a further decline in values today. At no time during the day was the market weak, and an enormous supply of cotton changed hands with the spinners big buyers. On the break the sentiment was quite bearish on the principle that the weight of the movement would overcome all trade buying and that this would bring a still further decline. While this situation might easily develop we consider the question of supply this year will ultimately bring about very much higher prices and that it is extremely inadvisable to follow the market down. HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, September 27.—Once again the markets have been largely overshadowed by the Near East situation and this brought heavy liquidation into the stock market and selling of cotton in sympathy therewith. The remarkable feature as applied to cotton is that the decline was stubbornly fought by orders underlying the market for the account of people who have faith in the demand for cotton goods and are firmly of the belief that the demand situation is menaced by the supply outlook. The Turks seem to be very determined in their stand and Great Britain is in no position to do anything else but face the issue. So whether hostilities do or do not develop seems to rest largely with the Turks. Beyond temporary adverse influence such as we witnessed in today's selling movement, there is no argument, so it seems to us, productive of lowering of prices. War has proven that the supply of cotton is drawn upon in extraordinary quantities to supply military demand. Consequently if war takes place the outlook for urgency will be on the part of buyers of cotton rather than that of sellers. October Liverpool due Thursday, 12.11.

STUDY THESE RULES FOR SUCCESS

1. The Familiar Quotations Pastime is open to any man, woman, boy or girl who is a resident of Georgia or adjoining states, except employees or relatives of employees of The Constitution. No entrance fees are required.

2. The Familiar Quotations Pastime consists of sixty pictures, one appearing in The Constitution each day. Each contestant may submit three title answers for each picture, each on a separate answer form. Selection of titles will be found in the Official Familiar Quotation Pastime Catalogue.

3. The Catalogue of Quotations may be consulted at the office of The Constitution, or at any public library in the prescribed territory of this Pastime. Participants may also purchase copies of this Catalogue at the office of The Constitution at 40 cents per copy.

4. Each person may participate only as one contestant, and only in his or her own name. However, each participant may submit as many as six complete sets of title answers. Each set of answers will be judged on its own merits. A duplicate list of the selections submitted should be retained by the contestant for self-checking purposes. Full instructions regarding this duplicate list will appear in The Constitution at the close of the Pastime.

5. Three methods may be followed in preparing answers: (1) Each picture published during the 60 days of the Pastime will be accompanied by an official Answer Form, with blank ruled lines for the inscription of your choice of title. (2) Participants may submit handdrawn (not traced) facsimiles of each picture and answer form on sheets of white paper 8x8 inches. (3) Quotations may be submitted in the convenient Familiar Quotations Answer Book.

6. Selections of quotations must not be sent in until the close of the Pastime. Then each participant is to mail or deliver his own set of selections according to instructions appearing in The Constitution. Quotations may be written with pen or pencil, or typewritten. After the publication of the sixtieth picture, sufficient time will be given contestants to prepare their sets of selections before submitting them.

7. The winners of the Familiar Quotations Pastime will be selected by three judges having no connection with The Constitution. These judges will be persons of the highest integrity and good judgment. It is understood that participants entering the Familiar Quotations Pastime accept their decisions as final and conclusive.

8. The fifteen awards in the Pastime will be made to the fifteen highest ranking answers on the basis of having achieved the most appropriate or "best" selection of quotations. If there is an equality between two or more answers a decision will be made by the judges between the tying answers according to superiority in the following requirements: (a) The least number of incorrect selections (the titles which are not "best"); (b) The relative position of the contestant's "best" answer—whether first, second or third choice. In the event of an ultimate tie, each tying contestant will receive an equal prize.

9. Use exactly the same form and spelling of quotations in your selections as you find listed in the Familiar Quotations Pastime Catalogue.

10. Any contestant may have his friends assist him in selecting titles for the pictures. However, only one prize will be awarded to any one household; nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group outside the family, who have worked together. The judges reserve the right to discard any set of quotations not complying with the rules and where unfairness is obvious.

BOND IS ARRANGED TO FREE ALLEGED SLAYER OF WIFE

Miami, Fla., September 27.—Edgar C. Frady, alleged wife-slayer, will be released from the Dade county jail tomorrow on $50,000 bond, which will be supplied by two Miami business men, his attorneys announced tonight.

County Solicitor Fred Pine and Assistant Prosecutor J. H. Swink declared tonight that they would appeal from the decision of Judge R. C. Davis of West Palm Beach, in Frady's second habeas corpus proceedings, rendered Tuesday, by which Frady is to regain his liberty pending his trial here next January. Frady, however, will be free while the appeal is in progress.

Frady, tonight in jail, declared he had heard of rumors that he was willing that put up a bond and jump it as the price of freedom and in denial asserted that while free he probably would remain in Miami until his trial.

Frady's plea in the hearing which secured his release was that he was suffering from an illness which would prove fatal if he was kept in confinement until January. He is under indictment for first degree murder in connection with the death of his wife, whom, it is alleged, he fatally shot in his suite of a local hotel last February.

TWO ARE CHARGED WITH SHOTS FIRED AT RAIL GUARDS

Rocky Mount, N. C., September 27.—J. L. and G. E. Daniels, brothers, were arrested here today on charges of assault with deadly weapons as the result of several shots being fired last night at the guards employed by the Atlantic Coast Line railway at its pumping station in this city. The guards are said to have returned the fire but no one was injured. The Danielses were released on bonds of $300 each and it was understood they would be tried in municipal court tomorrow.

Savannah, Ga., September 27.—(Special.)—L. M. Bryan, aged 50, prominent citizen of Luray, S. C., is in a local hospital, in a precarious condition, with a fractured skull, the result of being hit by a falling limb while he was in the woods where timber was being cut. An operation, it is said, may save his life.

FORMER POLICEMAN ACQUITTED AT TRIAL

Raleigh, N. C., September 27.—George J. Scott, a former member of the New York police force, charged with violating the federal motor vehicle act by aiding in the transportation of alleged stolen automobiles, was acquitted here late today in federal district court when Judge Connor held there was not sufficient evidence to connect him with the theft of the automobile in question and instructed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. Other charges against Scott growing out of alleged illegal traffic in stolen automobiles were nolle prossed.

Mining Camp Character

(From Everybody's Magazine.)

When Wallace Irwin, whose new story, "Daddy's Girl," appears in Everybody's Magazine for October, was asked for some material about himself, he replied:

"When I was in Cripple Creek, the town was burned down, supposedly by incendiaries—and I rode forty-eight hours on a stretch as a deputy sheriff with instructions to shoot first and ask questions afterward. Acting on that sage advice, I almost killed a colonel of the Colorado national guard. During all my life in the wild parts, I've only seen two deeds of violence. One was an old-fashioned barroom murder, and the other an attempt on the part of a Belgian pick-and-shovel man to kill a friend by rolling a bouler on his head. I worked in an assay office connected with a gold-reduction company, and once caused a day's boom in a sterile mining district by salting a mine. I failed to clean off the board where the sample was ground before being assayed, and, as a result, a lot of loose gold dust got mixed up with some rock which had lain for a million years, quite innocent of contact with the precious metal. For a few hours Cripple Creek thought it had discovered a bonanza—then the excitement subsided and I was turned out into the cold world."

Is Nothing Ever Rubbed Out?

(From Everybody's Magazine.)

In Vance Thompson's new mystery novel, "The Pointed Tower," which starts in Everybody's Magazine for October, he builds the story on the theory that nothing is ever rubbed out. The following is an interesting excerpt from the novel:

"Nothing can be rubbed out," Mr. Guelpa went on, "nothing. When one kind of matter is superimposed upon another kind of matter, the trace—the record—always remains. There is a game called 'ghost signatures.' You write your name on a smooth sheet of paper, using plenty of ink and, while it is still wet, fold it over and take an impress. It is queer-looking thing. The signature has become a blur, and opposite it is another blur—the ghost of it. You can't read that name if you look down on it, but hold it sidewise, and the signature is as plain as print. Rub out anything? Mr. Gross, of Athens, brought me a papyrus that was absolutely black—I photographed it—sidewise in an oblique light—and the message, buried for thousands of years, came to life on the chromolite plate."

WOMAN FIGURES IN SHOOTING CASE

the man did not commit suicide, but was murdered, and that a woman will figure prominently in the case. It is also not only possible but probable that both a man and woman had a part in the murder.

The man's right eye was swollen and bloodshot, indicating that some one had hit him, there were bloodstains on his hat and other evidence gathered by the detectives point clearly to a murder. Detective Hames thinks that he was attacked and shot beside the road, from the evidence disclosed.

The victim wore a pair of shoes that were bought at Black's shoe store and a blue serge suit from Kibler & Long. His hair was dark brown with a few gray hairs at the temple and pompadoured, his eyes blue, and he had one—possibly two—gold teeth in front.

Detectives Hames and Adams are still at work on the case and promise further disclosures shortly.

Coroner to Make Probe

A coroner's jury Thursday morning will hold an inquest over the body in an effort to determine its identity, and also fix the cause of death—whether suicide of murder.

It is also regarded as likely that the grand jury will begin a thorough investigation of the matter immediately following the inquest, as it is understood that county police and attaches of Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office are by no means satisfied with the theory of suicide.

"Of course, indications at the present are that the man killed himself, although it is not improbable that he was shot while sitting down and the gun thrown under the body to give the impression that he committed suicide," was the statement of Special Investigator Plenie Miner, of Solicitor General Boykin's office.

The body, which was found with a bullet wound in the heart, was at first thought to be that of Robert Higginbotham, of LaGrange. A hurried trip by the father, J. H. Higginbotham, to the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son, where the body is, soon dispelled this theory. After a careful examination of the body he stated it was too tall and large to be that of his son.

Deputy Sheriff Robert C. McCall, an uncle of Robert Higginbotham, was the one who thought it possibly his body. However, he stated that he had not seen his nephew in approximately five years and for that reason he was not positive.

County Policeman R. E. Jackson who was the first to reach the body after its discovery by a negro, Tom Germany, found no letters, papers, cards, watch or anything else that would throw any possible light as to who the dead man was.

OPENING CAMPAIGN REED RAPS TARIFF

Missouri Senator Styles New Bill "Most Monstrous Scheme of Plunder Ever Conceived."

Mexico, Mo., September 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—Declaring for a "reasonable" modification of the prohibition law, United States Senator James A. Reed tonight in an address here opened his campaign for reelection on the democratic ticket. He assailed the new tariff as the "most monstrous scheme of plunder ever conceived by selfishness and greed" and attacked the Harding administration.

Senator Reed had been challenged by his republican opponent, R. R. Brewster, to declare himself on the prohibition question in tonight's speech. Brewster in the primary campaign said he was as "dry as the 18th amendment."

Reed, who fought the league of nations, did not mention the league, but mentioned former President Wilson's name once in referring to Mr. Wilson's veto of the prohibition bill.

Views on Prohibition.

The senator asserted that all sections of the constitution should be enforced, and in this connection emphasized that the fourth amendment, which guarantees that rights of citizens shall be secure, should not be overlooked.

The speaker asserted he believed that prohibition should be left to the respective states, and explained that he opposed the 18th amendment "chiefly on the grounds that it invaded the rights of the states."

The speaker asserted he held "a sentiment of genuine friendship" towards President Harding and "was sorry for him, but even more sorry for the people of the United States."

Future of Bonus.

He referred to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon as "perhaps the wealthiest man in the United States," and stated that Mr. Mellon "interposed his powerful arm to prevent the passage of the first soldiers' bonus bill." Later, he said, a "so-called bonus bill was passed with the almost certain knowledge that it would be vetoed."

"So far as this administration is concerned," he continued, "the soldiers who served their country will take their pay in compliments and cheers."

Discussing the new tariff, Senator Reed said:

Taxes Everything.

"The tariff bill taxes everything from the swaddling clothes of infancy to the coffin of old age; the cotton socks worn by labor, the gingham apron of the kitchen, and the silk and woolen dresses worn by ladies of fashion. It puts a tax on every yard of woolen and cotton goods and upon every nail used by the farmer, and on his agricultural implements, for while the finished implement is hypocritically placed on the free list, its component parts are already enormously taxed."

He declared "the appalling and most unbelievable fact that the representatives of trusts and combinations, charged under indictment and sometimes under conviction for having combined to control prices and rob the people, boldly appeared before the committee on finance and demanded and obtained a tremendous advance in existing tariff rates."

FIBBED ABOUT AGE, ASSERTS HUSBAND SEEKING DIVORCE

Alleging that his wife, Mrs. Eugenia R. Hancock, of New York City, deceived him about her age, was addicted to narcotics, and created disturbances by railing at the servants in hotel and restaurants, Charles R. Hancock filed suit for divorce in the Fulton superior court Wednesday.

He further alleged that his wife took two $10,000 life insurance policies from his safe, and that he "lives in continual fear of his life."

The plaintiff is represented by the law firm of Colquitt & Conyers.

Appeal for Money To Relieve Hordes In Path of Battle

Near East relief headquarters, situated at 409 Georgia Savings bank building, following receipt of telegraphic communications from Constantinople describing conditions there as almost unbelievable, has issued special appeals to Greeks of Georgia, and generous response is reported.

The first check for $25 came in from the Imperial Fruit company, Atlanta, with a promise of further assistance. It is the purpose of the organization to send out an appeal to business houses or business concerns of the state in order to build up an emergency fund, which is declared necessary, as many thousands of people are being fed out of the regular hospital stock in 225 orphanages in the Near East.

A dispatch from H. A. Jaquith declares that failure of the allied governments to take adequate measures for relief and protection of survivors of the Smyrna massacre and fire is inspiring the Turks to new outrages and causing untold suffering to the thousands of Greeks and Armenians still camped on the city quay. The situation has become so bad that all workers of American organizations engaged in relief work in the Near East, under the chairmanship of Admiral Mark L. Bristol, American high commissioner to Turkey, have met in Constantinople to urge concerted action by the allied powers.

Dr. Wilfred Post, in charge of Near East relief work in the city, is endeavoring to get the Turks to bury the dead and to vaccinate everyone against cholera, smallpox, and other diseases, according to Mr. Jaquith, who is now in Constantinople.

BURGLARS PREPARE BIG FOOD SUPPLY FOR HOUSEKEEPING

T. E. Grizzard, of 18 Pause avenue, reports that robbers Wednesday night got 40 pounds of lard, 200 pounds of sugar, 15 pounds of bacon, and several 24-pound sacks of flour, using a truck to haul it off.

The gas meter of J. S. Bottieson, of 15 Highland avenue, was robbed Wednesday night by an unidentified negro.

B. C. Cochran reported the theft of 300 pounds of white lead and 48 gallons of paint from 29 Seminole avenue.

MRS. DAISY MARABLE GRANTED DIVORCE

Mrs. Daisy Marable was granted a divorce Tuesday by a jury of Judge Bell's division of the Fulton superior court on the charge of cruel treatment by her husband.

Mrs. Marable, who married in 1916, at the age of 13, says that her husband beat her cruelly because she refused to build fires for him on cold mornings, that he had made several threats against her life and that on one occasion he left her, carrying her two and a half-year-old baby with him.

Mr. Marable claimed that his wife had threatened him with a razor and told him to keep the child as she did not want it. Mrs. Marable was represented by Attorney John T. Tele while Mr. Marable was represented by Walter Sims.

CLARKE COUNTY FAIR NOW IS CERTAINTY

Athens, Ga., September 27.—(Special).—Announcement that the Chase Street grounds have been secured as a site and that premium lists now are in the hands of the printers, made the staging of the Clarke County fair October 23-28, a certainty.

These disclosures were made at a meeting of the farm bureau, in the city court room this afternoon and came at the end of an interesting program of lectures, one by Dr. J. R. Fain, agricultural college professor, and another by Dr. T. L. McHatton. Dr. Fain spoke on the value of the alfalfa crop.

NEGRO GIVEN THIRTY DAYS IN TRAFFIC CASE

A fine of $51 and a sentence of 30 days in the stockade Wednesday was the penalty imposed upon F. T. Banks, negro chauffeur of 341 Peeples street, in the court of Judge George E. Johnson. The negro was charged with exceeding the speed limit and endangering the life of a little girl when he drove a truck up on a sidewalk.

RESCUE WORKERS ASK HELP FOR BLIND MEN

Coats, trousers and shoes are still needed for the three blind men being cared for by the American Rescue Workers, according to Horace Burton, colonel in charge.

Any one who has shoes or clothing suitable for one of these men is urged to call Main 2515, or send them to the Rescue Workers Home, 26 Capitol avenue.

M'KENZIE INDICTED ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Two indictments charging Marshall McKenzie, of 1295 Peachtree street, well known local insurance man, with violation of the national prohibition laws, were returned Wednesday by the federal grand jury following consideration of the evidence during the last two days in the case.

Mr. McKenzie appeared at the clerk's office and signed his own recognizance for appearance before Judge Sibley. More than a dozen witnesses were examined in the case and a number of others who had previously been subpoenaed by the district attorney to testify were enjoined from appearing by counsel for the defendant. It was alleged in the injunction that federal officers raided the McKenzie home on the pretext of searching it for liquor and while there they discovered private papers of McKenzie, which tended to show liquor dealings with a number of persons.

Judge Sibley in granting the injunction ruled that evidence obtained in this manner was illegal and in violation of the constitutional rights of McKenzie.

Following the raid McKenzie, through his attorneys, filed suit against Clint W. Hager, United States district attorney; N. T. Jones, assistant prohibition director for Georgia, and George E. Golding, special investigator for the United States intelligence department, to restrain them from using the papers as evidence and for the return of the papers to him.

Emma Dowell, a negress in the employ of McKenzie, who was suspected of complicity in connection with the alleged liquor dealings of McKenzie, was summoned before the grand jury and testimony against her heard. The grand jury returned a "no bill" against the woman.

CRIPPLED BOY'S PARENTS SEEK CAR FARE HOME

With three vertebrae dislocated and three major ribs shattered as a result of an accident last January, Edgar Simmons, age 17, of Vienna, Ga., lies helpless and in dire need of aid at the home of Mrs. W. S. Dorough, 15 Weyman avenue.

Simmons was brought to Atlanta by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Simmons, for treatment at the Scottish Rite hospital, but were told by the surgeons of this institution that the lad was beyond human aid, and now with their funds exhausted the broken hearted parents appeal to the public for sufficient funds to secure transportation home.

His injury was caused by a falling tree which crushed and horribly mangled his body while working on the plantation of C. H. Taylor of Plant City, Fla.
